HITLER DEFIES MUSSOLINI; U. S. PROTEST DRAFTED

Come and See
Horsemen of the Air
No More Heart Balm
Napoleon's Drastic Rule

By Arthur Brisbane

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 20—You remember the strange creature in Revelations that said four times, "Come and see," each time a grim horse and rider starting out, red, black, white, or pale.

Hitler said to Europe, "Come and see," and above the darkness of Berlin, with every light in the city extinguished, Hitler's war planes rode out through the night, roaring over the city in an imitation of war bombing.

What Berlin, including representatives of foreign powers, saw, was a great war fleet, ready for business, not any mere Lufhansa passenger ships.

The alleged idea was to let Berlin's citizens prepare mentally for possible aerial bombardment. Every light in Berlin was extinguished, to prevent good airplane marksmanship; citizens, children included, provided with gas masks, were warned to hurry to nearest gas refuge, should bombardment start.

The real idea was a message to Europe, as follows:

"We have kicked over your Versailles treaty, and you do not like it. If you want to fight about it, you would do well to come and see that we are ready for you."

This country follows Europe's war threat with keen interest, like an infant watching a fly on the window pane. We could not do anything about it, if we tried, being unprepared for anything, except spending money. Nevertheless, Washington reports that our government thinks seriously of addressing a remonstrance to Berlin on the scrapping of the Versailles treaty.

Why should that be done, in the name of high heaven? Have we not troubles enough? Is it any of our business? Must we again send a President gallivanting about Europe, sleeping in Buckingham Palace at a cost to this country of ten thousand million dollars, for the fine lodging? Is it IMPOSSIBLE for this country to keep its mouth shut?

New York passes a law practically forbidding breach of promise suits by broken-hearted young ladies, that thought "his intentions were honorable." Such lawsuits, called "heart balm" suits by lawyers that grow rich on them, are often, not always, simply blackmail. A rich man plays the fool; a rascally lawyer brings suit for the little lady, and divides with her.

The great Wellington, after Waterloo, foolish as most men are, might have had such a suit, from a certain queer lady that really expected to marry him, but British public opinion would not have tolerated that, and besides, the Iron Duke was as innocent as he was foolish. The anti-balm law seems wise on the whole. It warns young ladies to take the advice that Mephistopheles gives Margaret in Faust, not to give a kiss or open her door, unless "with the ring on your finger."

Beginning today, some foolish old gentlemen will sleep more soundly, and some scheming lawyers and young women will turn to harder ways of making a living.

Napoleon, perhaps because he wanted plenty of French babies for the imperial armies, wrote into his laws a most severe "anti-heartbalm" regulation, expressed concisely as follows: La recherche de la paternite est interdite, meaning, "It is forbidden to seek to establish the paternity of a child."

In France, according to Napoleon's rule, the deceived one might not enter the court, infant in arms, and say, "That man is the father."

He has good eyesight, even "second-sight," who can see far into our American situation, at this moment.

Topsy-turvy land was plain common sense, compared with this land, and the ideas that control it. Innumerable voices through the air and through Congress, and the brain trust, each proclaim a separate perfect remedy for all troubles, all agreeing on one point only, that all the men engaged in building up this country since 1776 knew little or nothing, while those that made any money in the process should probably have been put in jail. If you know how to make a living off the dole or off the public payroll, you are presumably dishonest.

Very interesting is the new attitude toward old-fashioned thrift, once so highly recommended.

With excellent intentions, one gentleman would give two hundred dollars of government money every month, to every person past 60, which would be four hundred dollars a month for every old couple.

Nothing could be more wonderful or desirable than that, if the needed billions could be pro-

Dust Clouds Head East

13 DEAD In Storm TO DATE

HAZE HANGS OVER COAST

By Associated Press

Kansas City, March 21—Stifling dust storms shrouded the advent of spring from Eastern New Mexico to the Great Lakes today.

Powdered soil—white, yellow, red and black—whipped up from drouth-scourged prairies, hampered traffic, closed schools, hid the sun with a veil three miles thick and spilled across the Mississippi, eastward bound.

Physicians said inhaling of dust caused the pneumonia to which two-year-old Joseph Bernard Meier succumbed at Hays, Kan.

A dozen other deaths, due to suffocations, dust-induced pneumonia and traffic accidents, were charged against disturbances over affected states in the past week.

Freight trains rolled to sidings at the height of the storm and passenger trains traveled through semi-darkness under slow orders.

Sand ground into car engines swelled garage repair business at Dodge City, Kas. Three Kansas cross-state routes were closed to prevent the possibility of further fatal accidents.

Heavy Dust Clouds Sweep Into Cleveland

By Associated Press

Cleveland, March 21 — Dust clouds blown from western states covered Cleveland and northeastern Ohio today with a murky pall that reduced visibility to less than a mile.

The United States weather bureau reported the dust laden layer of atmosphere was 7000 feet thick, but slowly diminishing in content as it continued drifting eastward.

Prospects of relief, the weather bureau said, depend on the possibility of a change in the direction of the wind, or on the chance of widespread rain.

So heavy was the fall of dust in Cincinnati that W. C. Devereaux, U. S. meteorologist, said a heavy early morning rainfall could be properly described as "muddy."

Dust Storm May Not Reach N. E.

Officials at the Boston weather bureau indicated shortly before noon today there was little possibility of the midwestern dust storm reaching New England.

The storm was still raging in Nebraska, Kansas and parts of Oklahoma this morning.

CLARK TELLS CRIME IN COURT

Miller Frank Clark, testifying in his own defense in Superior Court made full confession he murdered 18-year-old Ethel Zuckerman in a South End bakery.

His rambling but dramatic recital of the slaying marked one of the few times in the history of American jurisprudence an accused slayer has admitted his guilt during trial.

The 56-year-old South End handyman said he slew the pretty bakery attendant because she had put him off again when he proposed marriage.

He testified:

"I asked her to marry me and she said, 'No, later on.'

"I said, 'If you don't marry me, I'll fix you,' and she started to go to the telephone and naturally I followed her.

"And naturally I grabbed the telephone and I hit her and she went down behind the showcase.

GLEASON Stirs Row in STATE HOUSE

Civil Service Commissioner James F. Hurley called state police today to remove City Councillor Richard D. Gleason of Roxbury from a hearing room in the basement of the sate house.

Gleason left with friends before troops arrived.

According to Hurley, Gleason sought a pay raise for a City Hospital cook, which was refused because the already is receiving the maximum.

"I'll clean out this joint, I'll fix you palookas," shouted Gleason, according to the commissioner.

There were about 50 in the room and the uproar drew a much larger crowd.

Pilot's Plight 9000 Feet Up

Ice on Wings Throws Plane Out of Control

At the mercy of the elements, Captain Glenn Salisbury was hurtled downward until a stratum of warm air, partially melting the ice on his wings, saved him.

As he soared from the ground he found the temperature around 40 degrees until he was up 5000 feet. Then the temperature began to drop swiftly.

Soon he was in a dense cloudbank. Rain pelted him. Ice piled up on the wings of his ship.

Once he was in control again after his harrowing experience, he soared aloft to 11,000 feet, skirting the storm area, and found perfect conditions. He could see Mt. Washington, 100 miles away.

Experts called the cloudbank that he had penetrated a tropical air mass. They said the rain was absorbed before reaching the ground.

More than 50,000 new circulars bearing a photograph and description of Dr. George H. Bigelow, missing Massachusetts General Hospital director, were sent out today.

SCREAMS SAVE Boy, 5, in Water

Screams for help by his four playmates today brought about the rescue of five-year-old Charles P. McLean of 24 Irwin street, Winthrop, from Crystal Cove, 200 yards from his home.

The screams of the four boys were heard by Charles Hurley, ice dealer, driving nearby. He ran to the boy's rescue.

McLean, playing with his chums on the banks of the cove, slipped and fell into three feet of water.

He was taken home by Hurley and put to bed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. J. McLean.

LOUIS HOWE Nears Death

Washington, March 21 (INS)—Louis McHenry Howe, President Roosevelt's secretary for 25 years, was close to death at the White House today.

Physicians have abandoned hope and assert that the end is a matter of hours.

FRANCE, ITALY FIND NOTES JUST 'WASTE PAPER'

Another Bombshell

BERLIN—Germany threw a new bombshell into the turbulent European situation today by flatly refusing to entertain notes tendered by France and Italy in protest against her violation of the Versailles Treaty military clauses. Astonished by the rebuff, the French and Italian ambassadors sent long reports to their governments. "Just waste paper," they term rejected notes.

WASHINGTON—State Department drafts protest note to Germany expressing "regret" Hitler has rearmed the Reich. Transmission of note delayed.

GENEVA—The League of Nations receives requests from France that Germany be placed on trial. France's request, declaring Germany threatened to "disturb the peace," seems a grave crisis for the League.

ROME—Premier Mussolini ready to address the Legislature on the crisis.

PARIS—The French government disregards request of Reich and publishes text of protest note.

VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius preparing an allocution and an encyclical letter, to plead for peace and disarmament.

Washington, March 21—The State Department has drafted a note of protest to Germany against Chancellor Adolf Hitler's proclamation of rearmament in defiance of peace treaty obligations.

International News Service is able to reveal exclusively that the note, as now drafted, states this government "cannot conceal its regret" at Germany's rearmament, which it considers a "violence" of the separate American treaty of peace with Germany.

Whether the note will be sent to Berlin has not yet been decided.

President Roosevelt has directed the State Department to proceed with extreme caution to avoid involving this country in the present European crisis.

The President does not want to take any steps which might commit this government to take sides.

The State Department, therefore, is desirous of awaiting a clarification of the European situation, and it is possible no decision will be reached concerning dispatch of the note pending the meeting next week between Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Hitler.

The view in some quarters, however, is that Germany should be notified this government considers its action a violation of the separate American treaty.

Under this treaty, signed in 1921, the United States was granted all the "rights and advantages" of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty, which Germany has renounced.

The state department is waiting for an opportune time to notify Germany this government feels obliged to call to its attention the fact that its action constituted a violation of the American treaty.

If the opportunity fails to present itself and the European situation becomes so complicated that any action by this country might be interpreted as committing itself in regard to future action, it is probable that the state department will withhold the protest. Meanwhile, the note is ready.

Hitler Again Rebuffs Allies

FRANCO-ITALIAN NOTES SPURNED

government today flatly declined to consider French and Italian protests against its unilateral abrogation of the Versailles Treaty military clauses.

After paying separate visits to the Reich foreign office to deliver the communications of their governments, the French and Italian ambassadors, to their great astonishment, were informed in effect by Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, the foreign minister, that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would pay no attention to them.

This action was interpreted in official circles as a warning that Germany already feels so strongly confident of her military power that paper protests of her violation of part five of the Treaty of Versailles, the section dealing with military restrictions, are useless.

Intimates of both ambassadors, Andre Francois-Poncet of France and Vittório Cerutti of Italy, said the envoys left Wilhelmstrasse feeling they had carried "another piece of paper to the waste basket." cannot be so sure," he said.

Both emissaries immediately sent long reports home to their governments.

The foreign minister's quick, curt answer apparently had been decided upon by Reich officials as soon as reports reached Berlin that the two powers intended to communicate their protests.

When Baron von Neurath took the French communication from the hand of Ambassador Francois-Poncet he frigidly remarked:

"The arguments adduced in the French note do not take the actual situation into account, wherefore the German government must decline to entertain the protest."

The Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerrutti, received the same curt reply when he delivered Premier Mussolini's protest to the foreign office two hours later.

France Calls on League To Put Germany on Trial

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Paris, March 21—France today bluntly accused Germany of violating treaty obligations in a note which the Reich refused to consider. At the same time France asked the League of Nations to put Germany on trial.

The note to Germany said the German action "was clearly contrary" to treaties and agreements and raised "the most formal protest."

The French communication was similar to one of the Italians deposited in the Wilhelmstrasse by the ambassadors of both France and Italy, but the Berlin foreign office announced officially that neither note would be considered.

Whereupon, the French government disregarded an arrangement with Berlin and published the note which covered three typewritten pages.

It warned Germany that the decision to re-establish its army was "clearly contrary to the contractual engagements written in the treaties that Germany signed" and declared it France's "duty to raise the most formal protest against these measures with regard to which it now had formulated every reservation."

Amassador Francois-Poncet left the note at the German foreign office which "accepted" the document but told the ambassador that the note disregarded the real situation and that therefore could not be taken into consideration.

The French decided that they must adopt a strong attitude toward Reichsfuehrer Hitler after the British "mildness" of protest.

The French note to the League of Nations pointed out that Germany still was a member of the Geneva body and asked its council to investigate Germany's rearmament, indicating that France considered Germany herself had proved violations of the Versailles Treaty by her announcements of army conscription and the institution of an air force.

As Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin directed the history-making moves, his hand was strengthened by a 263 to 21 vote of confidence in the senate.

Premier Flandin expressed the view the German army exceeds in the number of men it has available the 600,000 figure mentioned in the Chamber of Deputies.

Senator Henry Lemery said the army totaled "750,000 men, with 100 divisions of reserves ready to be mobilized immediately."

A German division, the senator said, is estimated to number 12,000 men, making total reserve strength 1,200,000.

Senator Raymond Armbruster said the Reich also was planning a fleet of 400,000 tons, adding:

"When Germany has re-created an army of 900,000 men, she will demand of the League of Nations revision of the territorial clauses of the treaty. She will demand Danzig, the Polish corridor, Memel, Eupen, Melmedy and Alsace-Lorraine. The League has too often disillusioned us for us to have faith in it."

Highlights From Notes To Germany and League

By Associated Press

Here are highlights from the three important notes exchanged today in European political crisis:

FRENCH NOTE TO GERMANY

The French Government . . . showed its confidence in the Government of the Reich by proposing to it a procedure of negotiation free and fully compatible with respect to the treaty rights for the establishment of contractual means of a new arms statue for Germany. . . .

"The publication of the German law o: March 16 . . . constitutes new manifestations of the methods the government of the Reich intends to toppose to the offers of conciliation which had been made to it. . . .

"The Government ofthe Reich has deliberately taken the most effective measures to compromise the fate of this negotiation. . . .

The French government "can only place on the German government responsibility for the state of uneasiness thus created in the world and the consequences which can result from it. . . ."

ITALIAN NOTE TO GERMANY

"The Italian government . . . had adhered to the principle that the question of German armament should have been the object of a general negotiation. . . . This proceedure had been accepted in principle by the German government itself . . .

"The Italian government therefore feels the duty of advancing the most ample reservation concerning the government of the Reich and its probable development . . .

". . . Th decision of the Reich acquires particular seriousness, especially for the state of uncertainty which it excites in all countries."

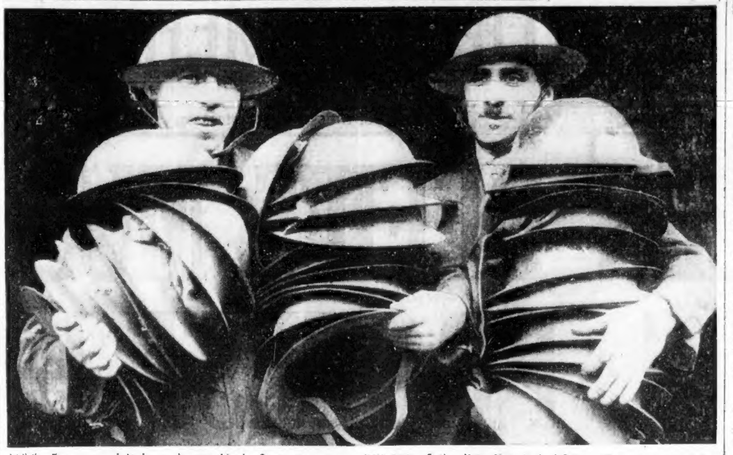
FRENCH NOTE TO LEAGUE

"The German government has decided on the reintroduction of general compulsory military service in the reich and to reorganize the German army into 12 army corps and 36 divisions. The German authorities also, a few days earlier, announced the creation of aGerman military aviation force.

"In both cases, the German government has deliberately repudiated, by a unilateral act, the contractual engagement embodied in the treaty which Germany signed. . . .

"Because of the gravity of the question raised by German initiative, I (the French foreign minister) have the honor to ask to call an extraordinary session of the council for the examination of the present request."

TIN HATS GET CALL IN CRISIS



While France and Italy and even Uncle Sam are composing notes on the subject of German war-mindedness, little Turkey attends to more practical business—that of cornering the market on second-hand trench helmets! A Turkish agent in London is reported to have purchased 170,000 of the "tin hats," including these two armfuls, made for the British army in 1918. He's scouting now for 230,000 more. PARIS ASKS LEAGUE TO CURB HITLER

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Geneva, March 21—France today officially pronounced Germany's decision to rearm as a potential threat to international peace, asking the League of Nations council to make an immediate examination of the German situation.

France's appeal, which was signed by Pierre Laval, foreign minister, declared Germany has "deliberately repudiated" the treaties it signed.

The French said that "owing to the gravity of the question" they requested an extraordinary meeting of the Council.

International circles described the French note as "solemn" and as broadly raising the issue before the world as to whether mutilateral treaties can be violated by unilateral action.

The League faced the gravest crisis in its history, in the opinion of many observers.

As the French communication asked that an extraordinary session of the council be convened, J. A. C. Avenol, secretary-general of the league, immediately consulted members of the council by telephone concerning the date on which the body should meet.

Generally it was believed the session would not be held until early April.

Some interested powers said they would prefer to have it take place after the tri-power meeting, which representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy are expected to attend after Captain Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, returns from Moscow.

That a grave view is taken of European developments was indicated by the fact that M. Rosenberg, Russian assistant to the secretary general, was summoned suddenly from Moscow.

Geneva feared additional complications may eventuate should German troops enter the demilitarized Rhineland zone.

This would immediately bring into play the Locarno treaty of which Itlaly and England are guarantors.

Italy to Keep Vast Army Prepared for War Call

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Rome, March 21—Frederico Baistrocchi, Under-Secretary of War, speaking in the presence of Premier Mussolini before a tense Chamber of Deputies, declared today that Italy would keep its present military class under arms.

He also said there would be no reduction in the Italian conscription terms, and that Italy was ready for "a war of movement."

The deputies, fully aware that only a short time earlier Germany had rewused to entertain an Italian protest against rearmament, leaped to their feet and shouted:

"Viva Il Duce! Viva l'ecercito!" (Long live Mussolini! Long live the army!)

Baistrocchi said Italy had speeded up all her military services. In consequence of the East African situation, he said, the whole military class of 1911 had received cards calling upon it to hold itself in readiness for service.

He indicated that other divisions are to be mobilized when he spoke of the mobiliaztion "for the present o ftwo divisions and the immediate constitution of other units destined to substitute for them and eventually to be mobilized also."

He said that the military class of 1913, now in service, would not be dismissed and that the reduction of the conscription term from 18 months to one year, although decided upon, would be undertaken only "when the moment is opportune."

"However," he said, "this is not the moment either to reduce the conscription term or to send the present class under arms home."

This means that the men of 1913 lil lstay under arms, despite the fact that the class of 1914 will begin its military service April 1.

It was announced that Premier Mussolini wquld deliver an important address on the German situation.

It was expected Il Duce would voice his support of France in the formation of a united Anglo-French-Italian front in opposition to German rearmament and would support France's recourse to the League of Nations, even though it is known he does not believe this to be the best procedure.

SOVIETS Back French LEAGUE PLEA

Moscow, March 21—Foreign quarters in Moscow said today they believed the full support of the Soviets would be given the French on the German armaments question in the League of Nations.

The decision of the French cabinet to appeal to Geneva was received in Moscow with great satisfaction as fitting in with the Soviet contention that a united front is necessary to deal with the situation resulting from Hitler's creation of a conscript army.

The Soviet government has been officially advised that Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, is coming to Moscow and has extended its invitation to him although the date for his visit has not yet been fixed.

30,000 FAVOR Cancer Hospital

More than 30,000 persons were recorded in favor of a state cancer hospital today while 400 packed the Gardiner Auditorium at the State House for a hearing before the legislative committee on public health.

Senator Frank Hurley of Holyoke, sponsor of a bill that asks a hospital with100 beds, declared:

"From the dread diseasd two thousand persons died in this state last year without any treatment. One out of every two cases can be cured. We are curing only ond out of every seven at seven."

Gathering war clouds, no matter how dark, have never intimidated Dan Cupid yet—and Berlin is all sympathetic interest in the undenied romance between Hermann Goering, Prussian minister and German air fleet chief, and Frau Emmy Sonnemann, popular German actress. Herr Goering is resplendent in formal evening attire as he and his fiancee appear together.

Pope Plans Note on Arms

By Associated Press

Vatican City, March 21—Prelates said today that Pope Pius is preparing an allocution on the world situation as a result of Germany's arms decision, which will be read to the cardinals in a secret consistory April 1.

The Pontiff also is writing an encyclical to be published at the conclusion of the Holy Year, in which he again will plead for peace and disarmament.

The prepartion of the allocution and the encyclical, a prelate said, explains why the Pope, who usually takes advantage of world occasions to make a pronouncement, has not yet made known his thoughts on the present situation.

vided, but there is this "catch" in it. The elderly person receiving his $200 a month must spend every penny of it, within the next 30 days. Any dollar not spent would be worthless at the end of the month.

The grandfather used to say, "Johnny, here is a penny, run and put it in your little bank, and be a great man like grandpa."

Now grandpa must say, "Johnny, here is a penny. Run to the candy store and spend it, this minute, or I'll take it away from you, and beat you within an inch of your life, for not doing your part."

Some elderly persons, each receiving $200 a month, might be old-fashioned Americans, of the saving kind, anxious to help grandchildren through college, or help some worthless son-in-law to start in life. Some might be intelligent enough to know that the out-pouring of billions could not possibly last forever. It would be cruel not to let them have something, say $100 each a month, against a day when the billion-spring might run dry.

It is to be hoped the generous desire to give the elderly a sum beyond their fondest hopes, will not result in discouraging a reasonable, possible and sufficient pension to which every dependent person past 60 should be entitled.

At present, any congressman voting for a pension of say $40 a month, such a pension as the government might pay and continue paying, would probably be accused of stinginess, told that he was trying to deprive the old of their rights.

Give an old couple $80 a month, with transportation to this country, of sunshine, warmth and beauty, and, as 1,000,000 Californians will tell you, that couple could live happily, in utmost comfort, and continue living, indefinitely. People rarely die here, unless they worry.

Not far from here, in a small town, two veterans of the Civil War live close together, and fight their battles over, with pipes to help conversation.

Both, necessarily are far past 80 years of age. One, with a pension of $46 a month, tells you, "I have everything I want, and have banked $15 every month, for many years."

When those pensions were granted, no one had the happy "spend every penny as fast as you get it" idea.

The other Civil War pensioner gets $60 a month from a grateful government, and envies no Vanderbilt, Astor or Croesus. Says he, "Who could have more than I have? I have my little bungalow and would not trade it for any palace. I used to keep a little car, but I'm a little old to run it now, so I gave it up, and save the money. Maybe I give some of it away, but that's my business."

Two hundred dollars a month would be delightful, but many an old couple travelling what Hector's father called "the hateful road of old age," would gladly settle for $80 a month for two, if they could be sure of getting it every month.

Have you any beef cattle or hogs for sale? If so, rejoice. You were told here, some months ago, to keep your cattle for higher prices. Those prices have come, the highest in years. And farmers that held on are glad. Those that buy the beef to eat it see the other side of the medal.

Steve Zegar says, "Everybody should be glad that the farmers are getting a break, but when I pay fifteen cents now for two pounds of hamburger steak that used to cost me twelve cents, I wonder what hard-up folks do."

Britain Fears New Crisis In Franco-Italian Rebuke

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

London, March 21—Germany's rejection of the French and Italian protests against her rearmament was regarded today in unofficial but informed circles as an unexpected jolt which may cause another crisis before Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, meets Hitler in Berlin for their once-postponed conversations.

Government officials, having received nothing but unofficial word of the German rebuff to the French and Italian ambassadors, were startled but withheld comment until the receipt of official advices.

Naval matters, in which Great Britain has a traditionally vital interest, likely will be included in the scope of the Berlin conversations between Sir John and Hitler.

It was understood Sir John has intimated through the British embassy in Berlin his desire to learn the full extent of German conscription plans for all services, including the navy.

If time permits, it is also expected the conferees will go into other phases of the naval question, such as the future size of the Reich's fleet. This information, the British believe, will be most useful for later consideration of general naval armaments.

Astor Hears Briny Call

Gets $25 Job

BEGINS WORK ON DOCKS FOR OCEAN LINE

It was news today that John Jacob Astor, III, spouse of "Tucky" French of Dedham and Newport, was working on the New York docks for $25-a-week.

But it wasn't much of a shock to a long line of other scions of millionaire families who started "from the bottom," and lived through it.

Young Astor was only turning over a leaf in the book that two generations of Rockeefellers, Edsel Ford, the Vanderbilts and others had read and mastered long before.

And to get closer to home, there is James Roosevelt, son of the President; and his one-time insurance business partner, Douglas Lawson, son of Copper King "Tom" Lawson. Even altruistic Charles Garland, who spurned pa's millions. But Garland didn't try to make millions of his own.

The Astor heir is out to make his own millions, and he told interviewers he was willing to work for them.

His job is sort of an assistant assistant clerkship with the International Mercantile Marine. He's a junior to four other clerks. He works 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, with an hour for lunch and a half-day on Saturdays.

Why Astor ever turned to the sea, which sent his father to death in the ill-fated Titanic even before J. J. III. was born, nobody could figure today.

Tucky Hates Briny

Ellen Tuck French, the Massachusetts girl he married after his engagement to Eileen Gillespie of New York went smash, positively dislikes the briny.

And, on the other hand, ex-fiancee Eileen was "crazy about it." So what?

Astors, however, though the original fortune came out of fur-trading, always seem to show a penchant for ships.

Half-brother Vincent Astor, who's one of the chief stockholders of the shipping company where John Jacob, III, got his job, is famed for his yacht Nourmahal which the President borrows now and then.

And the youngest Astor scion, admitting that this kind of a job "wasn't Mrs. Astor's idea," nevertheless maintained:

"I like ships. I've always wanted to get a job connected with the sea."

He told reporters that as he was clambering aboard the S. S. President Roosevelt, one of the I. M. M.'s ace liners. He had to meet the boss, he said.

The "boss" is Captain Fred Pender, assistant marine superintendent of the I. M. M.

Begin on Bottom

Astor further explained:

"I don't know how long this will last. I may get fired. But I'm enthusiastic over it. I'm willing to begin at the bottom and I hope to work up to an executive job."

An "executive job"—so that was the catch, reporters decided!

"I don't expect to advance through 'pull' either. I am out to learn this complicated business and I'm really going to work hard at it.

Young Astor, who got married last June, is only 23, and he has sole rights to a fortune estimated at anywhere from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000.

But like Edsel Ford, who started in Father Henry's factories; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Winthrop, his son, both of whom went to work in the original Rockefeller's oil companies, and the rest of the industrious rich men's sons, it was Astor's "own idea."

BOY SEARED

in Fall on Wires

Hughie Wallace, 12, of 90 Glenwood road, Somerville, is all through climbing trees for a while. Hughie fell from a tree in front of his house and landed on some electric wires.

He hung there long enough to have his hands burned to the bone and his right foot and back injured, then fell to a hedge. According to electric light company workmen, he was lucky to escape alive.

ARLINGTON

Refuses Pay Cut

Turning down a 10 per cent salary cut for town workers as proposed by the finance committee, the Arlington town meeting voted almost unanimously to continue the present pay.

The vote followed heated debate, during which it was pointed out by George H. Lowe, Jr., chairman of the selectmen, that the cut was not needed to prevent an increase in taxes.

Ellen Tuck ("Tucky") French of Dedham and Newport, now Mrs. John Jacob Astor, III, who positively dislikes the sea. Led to the altar last summer by the heir to from five to 20 millions, her marriage doubly interested the public whose appetite was whetted by the Eileen-Astor break-up. Perhaps she hates the ocean because Eileen likes it.

TURNS TO SEA WHICH TOOK FATHER

Just a wage-slave now! That's John Jacob Astor, Jr., who is augmenting his multi-million dollar fortune by toiling at this shipping clerk's desk for a salary of $25 a week. The suit he's wearing cost six times his six-day stipend. He hopes, however, to earn business advancement, strictly on a "merit" basis. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Waving farewell to the Statue of Liberty, Eileen Gillespie, departs for a cruise on that briny ocean "she is crazy about." A year ago she was that way with young Astor—and when she returned to him the big diamond that sealed their engagement, the nation's social world was agog.

BONUS

Vote Due

LATER TODAY

By Associated Press

Washington, March 21—Leaders summoned the House to meet an hour earlier than usual today to wind up debate on the bonus and get down to the task of voting on various "compromise" amendments.

The hope was that the voting could start about 3 p. m.

There were no indications, however, that the House would arrive at a choice between the two major cash payment bills—the Patman and the Vinson-American Legion measures—before tomorrow at the earliest.

Backers of Representative Patman (D-Texas), who would pay the $2,000,000,000 by issuing new currency, were saying that they would win by a 6 to 4 proportion over the bill offered by Rep. Vinson (D-Ky.).

Bad Bankers

The granting of charters for banks to persons who knew nothing of banking, was responsible for 13,000 banks closing, according to Wilbur F. Lawson, vice-president of the First National of Boston, addressing a meeting of cost accountants at Chamber of Commerce.

Dinner Off

Washington, March 21—The annual dinner of the White House correspondents association scheduled for this Saturday night has been postponed on account of the critical illness of Louis M. Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt. It is planned to have the dinner on April 27.

CATHCART PATH

By Associated Press

Chicago, March 21—The United States government today considered shunting John Strachey, British author and lecturer, along the path trod from America by Emma Goldman, Countess Vera Cathcart and other Europeans deemed inimical to American institutions.

Charged with giving misstatements as he entered the country, Strachey came to Chicago to answer the Immigration Department's charges today.

A furore after Strachey's arrest last week recalled the futile legal fights Emma Goldman and Countess Cathcart made to avoid deportation.

JUST A PAL

Ten-year-old Philip Halpin, 105 Houston avenue, Milton, was safe at home today. Yesterday he disappeared after leaving Tucker grammar school. His anxious parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Halpin, notified the police.

Boy Scouts and volunteer citizens searched woods and ponds near Milton.

But Philip had a friend his mother did not know. Philip had just been visiting him.

HULTMAN

Charges

READY

COVER 4 YEARS IN OFFICE

Specifications of charges on which Governor Curley seeks removal of Eugene C. Hultman from the Metropolitan District Commission were being prepared today by the governor's special counsel.

John P. Feeney, who yesterday told the governor and executive council that the case involves moral turpitude, expects to have the specifications completed by Monday and in the hands of Clarence A. Barnes, Hultman's attorney.

All the charges are based on Hultman's conduct in office as Boston police commissioner for four years, it is understood.

Stay Granted

The hearing itself will begin formally on April 3. Governor Curley granted Attorney Barnes a continuance to that date in order that the defense might be prepared.

But a lot of persons around the State House wanted to know:

What is "moral turpitude?"

An attorney who chased through the Supreme Court decisions on the subject reported that what constituted moral turpitude all depended on the point of view. He said:

"It could range from spitting on the sidewalk to stealing $1,000,000."

Charles Ponzi, the erstwhile North End wizard of finance, was deported on a charge of moral turpitude, but he wasn't around to explain it.

With a temporary armistice in the Hultman case, there was little in the offing today except a possible forthcoming decision by the attorney general's office on Samuel Kalesky's qualifications for finance commissioner.

Attorney Philip A. Chapman, former purchasing agent for the city of Boston, was confirmed as a member of the Boston finance commission at the executive council meeting yesterday.

He succeeded Joseph McKenney, who resigned. Kalesky was slated to succeed Judge Jacob J. Kaplan, who is considered deposed by the governor.

HOW GIRL PLUNGED 3 STORIES AND LIVED

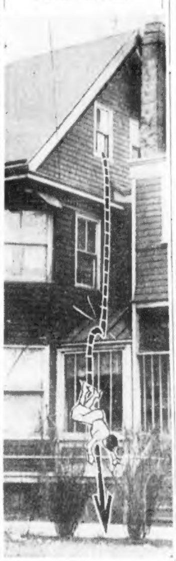

Diagram shows how a young woman, said by police to be Mary Single, 25, plunged from a third story window of a house in Clark street, Chelsea, hitting a sun room's glass roof in her fall. In spite of a broken leg sne was able to walk to a street corner 300 yards away. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Forte in Address

Hartford, Ct, March 21—Judge Felix Forte of Boston will be the speaker at the annual conference of the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution here tonight. His subject will be "Citizenship."

GIRL'S Mystery PLUNGE

WANDERS ON BROKEN LEG

Escaping death in a three-story plunge, a mystery girl walked 300 feet through back yards and streets on a broken leg early today before being picked up by Chelsea police.

At Chelsea Memorial Hospital, the woman first said she was Annie Gilman, but later declared herself to be Mary Single, 25.

She was vague about her home address, but said she has two brothers in Peabody.

Two Chelsea officers in a radio car saw the woman standing at Broadway and Crescent avenue at 5:15 a. m., her two forearms covered with blood.

At the hospital she was treated for a broken right leg and lacerations of both hands and forearms.

She admitted, according to police, that she had jumped from a third-story window in a house in Clark avenue, where she has been rooming.

At the Clark avenue house police found Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Seltzer examining the wreckage of a sun-room on the first floor, the glass roof of which had been shattered.

On the third floor a window also was shattered, and this was the room, the Seltzers said, which had been occupied for the past six months by the woman giving her name as Single.

The girl said she had fallen asleep, fully clothed, and had dreamed that she was being chased by a man.

It was then, she said, that she hurled herself through the attic window, to crash through the sun-room roof on the first floor.

From here, she said, she went out another window, climbed a fence, wandered through several backyards and finally came out into the street.

DAVEY'S AID

Columbus, O., March 21 (AP)—Governor Martin L. Davey's chief patronage dispenser, Francis W. Poulson, was summoned today before a grand jury asked to investigate an alleged "corrupt" alliance between politics and relief in Ohio.

QUINCY Election MAY 7

ROSS PLANS 2-WAY BATTLE

Still silent about the judicial blow that toppled him out of the Quincy mayoral chair, Charles A. Ross hurriedly prepared today with his lawyers and political followers for a two-way battle for vindication.

All signs indicated that his attorneys would go into court to ask the three judges who ousted Ross to let the supreme court pass on the case.

And the Ross forces were making no secret of the fact that they are seeking a candidate for the special election who can stand for Ross.

The day of the special election has been set for Tuesday, May 7.

Their candidate may even be the ousted mayor's wife or his son, Charles N. Ross. Ross cannot run for office nor vote for three years.

He was removed as mayor of Quincy by Superior Court Judges Fosdick, MacLeod and Keating, for violation of the corrupt practices section of the election law, governing campaign expenditures.

Ross "Can't Talk"

Nomination papers available for the score of prospective candidates—Monday, March 25.

Nominations close — Saturday, April 6, 5 p. m.

Primary election—Tuesday, April 16.

Registration of new voters—Wednesday, April 17.

Final special election—Tuesday, May 7.

Ross drove up to city hall shortly before noon with Public Works Commissioner Angelo Bizzozero. He remained in the car which was quickly surrounded by a crowd.

"Can't talk now, may have a statement later, after talking to this man," he said.

The ousted mayor appeared to be in good health, giving the lie to stories that he had collapsed.

Mullin May Run

Leo E. Mullin, city council president, who will be acting mayor, left his work as a maintenance foreman in the Fore River shipyards and went to City Hall to find floral tributes awaiting him.

City Clerk Crane went to the State House to get official notification of the Ross ouster from Secretary of State Cook, so that he could swear in Mullin.

"My employers will co-operate with the city by giving me a leave of absence if necessary to carry on my official duties," said Mullin. "I am considering running for mayor."

'END REDS!' Plea Made TO D. A. R.

"Stamp out Communism" was the plea of James G. Moran, president of the Massachusetts Senate, to the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Addressing the 41st state conference of the Massachusetts D. A. R. at the Hotel Statler, Senator Moran said:

"You women of true American traditions have a special work to do.

"As believers in the destiny of America, you must strive to keep alive only that which is best in Americanism.

"You must insist that all efforts to alter the form of our government or our institutions, through radical ideas which are foreign to our people, be killed at the roots."

At the business session of the conference, Miss Franklin E. Nason, of Scituate, was elected state regent, and Miss Ethel Lane vice-regent.

'ToughestGuy' Goes to Chair

2 Extra Shocks Needed to Execute Killer

By International News Service

Chicago, March 21—Chester Novak, 30-year-old killer, made good his boast that he would be "the toughest guy they ever burned in that chair" when he was electrocuted early today in Cook County Jail.

His executioners gave the self-styled "tough guy" the usual two jolts of electricity after he had marched, soldier-like, to the chair.

Witnesses assumed he was dead and prepared to leave. But he wasn't dead, as the six doctors who examined him attested.

For the first time in the history of the county jail death room, two more burning jolts of electricity were administered—one of 1900 volts, one of 900.

Novak ate a hearty meal last pold, would be entrusted with his guards until it was time to begin the death march.

GUNS ON LEVEES To Balk Dynamiters

Greenwood, Miss., March 21 (AP)—State troops shouldered guns on levees near here today as an aftermath of a wild night in which two dykes were blasted nad private guards and vandals threatened open battle.

The nation's major flood threat shifted to Tallahatchie and LeFlore counties after several hundred men overpowered guards on a Tallahatchie river levee west of Philipp, biasted it with dynamite and then blew another dyke near Mace. Reports that farmers, feeling levees were protecting certain areas from floods at the expense of others, planned a general dynamiting.

ARREST Due in Death OF SUPRENARD

An arrest in the mysterious death of Arthur T. Suprenard, 42, at a stag party in the Parker House Monday night, was promised today by Lieutenant Inspector Joseph Decker and Inspector George Augusta.

The 138 persons who were present when the blow was struck which resulted in Suprenard's death expressed ignorance of the ocurrence.

Even the man who was alleged to be holding Suprenard when he was struck did not see the blow, or the man who delivered it, he told police.

A porter, Ralph Kelly, however, described the man he said he saw strike the blow, and as a result police were today seeking a liquor salesman.

ZUCKERMAN KILLER'S STORY

with a quick-stabbing forefinger.

"Then I went up to the Common," he continued, "and hung around and went to work in the morning. It was raining so — — hard, I went home. Then in the morning I went to work."

Clark's testimony was a mass of contradictions, and even after making his confession on the stand he said later while still under questioning by his counsel, George A. Douglas:

"What, me kill that little girl? Of course not!"

Still later he said he confessed to police because they had given him a cigarette.

"It was the cigarette that made me do it," he declared.

At the first question asked—how long he had worked for a certain employer—Clark rubbed his hand over his forehead, looked strangely at Douglas and ejaculated:

"Whew!"

"Didn't you understand my question?" asked Dougles.

Recess Called

Douglas and court attendants jumped forward and caught the witness before he could hit the floor. Recess was called and he was given water and revived.

Resuming the stand, Clark testified and out of the ramblings were drawn the information that he lived in a $2 room in Florence st., South End, and worked at odd jobs.

Clark testified, confusingly, that he went occasionally to Bikofsky's Bakery in Harrison avenue; that he never saw Ethel Zuckerman there; that he did see Ethel there; that he didn't know her, and that he had asked her to marry him.

Then again he declared he had never seen her.

He denied having told anyone, even Douglas, that he had seen the girl in the bakery. He made morning trips to the bakery for "catpies," he declared, and went "once at night."

Then, in a surprise answer to a question as to how many times he had seen the girl in the bakery, Clark blandly answered:

"Twice, but once she was not in person. She was in a picture —the same as in a newspaper."

Coming up to the murder night, December 20, 1933, Clark said he had come home about 6:30 p. m. and had been sent out for a box with which to make a fire.

"Thick," He Says

Then he switched the time to 10:30 p. m. and said that instead of getting the box he went to the bakery for some "cat-pies."

"I only got as far as the fifth grade in 10 years," he interjected. "I was too thick."

Then, after making his amazing confession, Clark declared that a year ago he had boxed "Honeyboy" Finnegan in Lowell, "just for fun," but had been knocked out in the third round.

The testimony caused titters in the courtroom. Finnegan, who has not boxed professionally for several years, is now a court officer.

He is not assigned to the Clark trial, however.

Woman 'Raffles' on Loose; Roxbury Police on Mat

Every Roxbury policeman was "on the carpet" today with disclosure of eight apartment breaks by a "Raffles," possibly a woman.

Loot of the breaks totals $2500 in jewels, cash and clothing. Five of the victims are women.

Captain Thomas J. Casey of the Roxbury Crossing station took every patrolman and detective to task for failure to capture the thief.

All the breaks are on the edge of the Back Bay district on the Roxbury Crossing division. They have all take place in less than a month, the thief operating with a false key between 7 and 10 p. m.

Because in almost every instance woman's clothing was stolen, police believe the thief is either a woman or is working with a woman.

The victims and loot:

Mrs. Annie Studley, Riverway, $150 cash, rings, watch.

HILLMAN Quizzed on LINK TO SOVIET

By International News Service.

Washington, March 21—Sharply questioned as to his connections with Russia and as to the dispatch of funds through his labor union to Soviet Russia, Sidney Hillman, member of the national recovery board, flung back angry answers at the Senate inquisitors into the NRA today.

Hillman told the committee he was born in Lithuania, a former Russian grand duchy, was naturalized in the United States in 1906 and had visited Russia three times since the World War.

But when Senator King (D.) of Utah, who would scrap the NRA, persisted in questioning Hillman along thes line, the witness shouted his resentment.

Near the end of his testimony Hillman voiced a ringing defense of NRA as the small business man's friend in an obvious reply to Clarence Darrow's statement yesterday.

"I challenge anybody to prove the assertion that NRA has hurt the small business man," he said. "If it were not for the NRA the small business man would be completely out of business.

"Gentlemen, I don't believe—if you take away NRA—I don't believe that there is a financial institution in the country that can kep its doors open six months."

SURRENDERS To Save Mother

Where everything else had failed, a move against his mother sent Louis Abbruggese, 26, of Chestnut street, Lynn, back into police hands again today.

Rather than see his mother lose by a county suit the $5000 she had put up for bail, Abbruggese surrendered on a charge that he burglarized a lunchroom.

Abbruggese, a paroled State Prison inmate, had jumped the bail last July.

Called In to Solve Adoption "Forgery"

State Detective Michael Fleming was assigned today to clear up some of the mystery surrounding the adoption of a baby boy, which Charles H. Bond claims he thought was his own child for six years.

Bond gave this testimony at a hearing in Dedham court in which Mrs. Mary Farley Bond is cited to show cause why she should not be held in contempt for forging Bond's name to adoption papers.

It was this phase of the case to which State Detective Fleming was assigned by Judge McCoole. Meanwhile, pending the trooper's report the hearing was continued until Tuesday.

Bond claimed that when he came home one evening he found his wife in bed, the baby beside her. He said she told him then the baby was their own. He denied ever having signed adoption papers.

The baby was the child of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Durant of Boston. The adoption took place in 1928.

MYSTERY HERE! Mute Bell Stolen

An ancient bronze bell as old as the public school system in Medford has been stolen from Curtis school in Paris street.

George E. Giles, superintendent of school buildings, discovered the loss.

Many Medford citizens did not know that there was a bell in the Curtis school. Though it has been there for generations, even the oldest residents cannot recall when it ever rang.

'RUM BID' Charge Made at DURGIN TRIAL

Salem, March 21—Trial of Frank L. Durgin in superior court today was thrown into confusion when police claimed that a Durgin witness had talked with six jurors.

Durgin, Lynn Yacht Club official and proprietor of a package store on Newhall street, Lynn, is charged wtih illegal manufacture of liquor.

Police charged that a witness had offered a half dozen jurors a cruise on Durgin's yacht, and mentioned that Durgin made choice rum.

After a conference with the jury and denials from the witness, the judge allowed the case to continue.

Durgin's defense is that he made the rum to give to fellow yachtsmen on their cruises. William E. Cole, Sagamore street, Lynn, testified that the rum was very fine, indeed.

"The rum was the feature of our week-end cruises," he testified.

CHAPMAN Is Sworn In

Governor Curley today administered the oath of office to Philip A. Chapman as a member of the Boston finance commission. Chapman, former purchasing agents for the city of Boston, takes the place of Joseph McKenney, who resigned recently to accept a position in the physical education department of the school committee.

COTTAGE HUNT For Missing Boys

Plymouth, March 21—Cottages in the woods and around 100 ponds were searched today for four Plymouth Boy Scouts, missing since last night.

The four are Willard LaVoie, 13, and his brother Weldon, 11, both of Billington street; Oliver Paul, 13, of Howland street, and William Ide, 12, of 156½ Summer street.

He Saved Him

After half an hour he saved the dog.

This is what delayed him:

He left the roof. He ran to the pond. He got a canoe. He worked it out 50 feet through ice chunks. He was spilled into the water.

He salvaged himself and the canoe. He went home and changed his clothes.

He returned to the pond. He got a boat. He tipped over again, but righted the boat. Finally he saved the dog and got ashore safely.

$7500 HOTZE Bail Filed

Joseph Hotze of Seaver street, Roxbury, alleged "number king," indicted for income tax evasion, today put up new bail of $7500 at the request of United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford and his assistant, Joseph D. Hurley.

After pleading not guilty last week, a temporary bond for that amount was filed.

Anna Hillman, 18 Abbott street, Dorchester, posted two $500 government bonds and a bankbook with deposits of $1525. John E. Rosengard, public accountant, of 180 Harvard street, Dorchester, put up property in Chelsea valued at $52,000, on which there is a $25,000 mortgage. No date has been set for trial.

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Today is the true Easter, the first day of spring.

Even if the official holy-day does linger, this year, on the heels of Patriots' Day—making a curious incongruity between that and Good Friday—yet by all the most ancient wisdom the year is born again today.

Robert E. Rogers

Everywhere we see the signs about us. The newspaper pages are crowded with every kind of queer and new hat and coat—redingote, roquelaire, spencer, and polonaise—and the gowns to go with them. And they will be bought, too, and presently, if only the sun comes out and the temperature lingers around 50 or 60.

One can't wait a whole month for new clothes just because Easter is late. It is getting difficult once more to park in the Boston downtown streets. Keep a wary eye out for the punctual cop and the unbeatable tag.

Spring is in the home. It is a comfortable feeling to turn down the thermostat and forget it, to stop thinking about it as you think of a taxi-meter on a long drive.

The dog goes about with a self-effacing air, hearing sounds of cleaning and washing and scrubbing, thinking guiltily of her own somewhat dingy condition—she is supposed to be white—and inclined to crawl under sofas and tables when she senses that soap and water approach in her general direction. She enjoys being white and curly and sweet smelling once more, but how she does loathe the process!

Real Signs

And daughter complains bitterly of her winter [illegible] and winter dresses and winter shoes, speaks hopefully of hats and somewhat imperiously of a [illegible] coat—the kind all the girls are wearing—and galumphs over the still muddy remnants of the lawn [illegible] without [illegible]

[illegible] paint job—I saw an emerald-turquoise yesterday that made the spring grass look sick. And once you see it there begins that little whisper in your heart, that little suggestion of temptation and doubt and hesitation that says:

"The old car will do perfectly well another year" . . .

"Yes, but after all it's all paid for now, and it doesn't seem right, somehow not to have a car to be paying for."

"A Good Job"

"But you must admit it hasn't the new parabolic radiator and the sideways drive and the screened-in porch and the reciprocating carburetor and the rubber steering gear and . . ."

"But the Whosisses have a new Glutz 16 and how they did it heaven only knows . . ."

"Well, of course he's got a good job on the ERA . . ."

Spring is come across the water, too. Little sharp blades pricking up through the ploughed fields in Germany, in Poland and Russia, in France and Italy.

The first upshoots of tender baby bayonets and fresh little pickelhaubes stirring the soil. It will be summer soon and the sun will shine on great fields of shining bayonets and spiked helmets. And by autumn what harvest will Der Fuehrer have reaped in the rich plains of Europe!

And over here? What are those tiny green leaves peeping up through the stubble? They look like baby greenbacks. Perhaps it is the new inflation crop—of paper money without any backing of hard money or proper credit.

If the bonus passes we shall need it. The little green shoots will have to be watered and cultivated and reaped and distributed.

What a harvest of fake money will be needed for the Townsend Plan and the bonus and all administration policies. And always the chance that the new crop will turn out to be weeds and ruin the harvest.

Never mind. It's a growthy time of year and we must take what Nature sends and be content.

DESERT Threat From DUST

NATION WARNED OF NEW MENACE

By International News Service

Washington, March 21—A warning that great areas in the dust-storm belt of the West will be turned into deserts unless prompt action is taken was given to a House public lands sub committee today by H. H. Bennett, director of soil erosion for the Department of Interior.

"We know that new desert areas are being created in Africa through misuse of the land," said Bennett.

"We know of 2,700,000 acres of land in parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico that will be destroyed outright unless given protection or unless there are unusual rains."

Blown Out to Sea

Soil from the west has been blown on ships 300 miles at sea in the Atlantic ocean.

The east was visited by the first "yellow rain" on March 6, since the white man came to America.

It will take nature 400 to 1000 years to reclaim some land denuded of top soil by dus storms.

Dr. W. C. Lowdermilk, vice director of the soil erosion service, said the entire irrigation system of the southwest is doomed to destruction unless deposit of silt in reservoirs is halted.

To visualize the danger, Bennett said that last year 300,000,000 tons of soil—equivalent to 1[illegible]000 acres of soil 12 inches deep—was carried through the air.

"The trouble is that entire ranches were [illegible] under in the west," he explained. "[illegible] 15 or 20 years there was a [illegible] in decayed matter, which binds the soil together.

"Then when the drought came, the soil lay loose in the land. It is the result of an accumulated [illegible] of the soil."

[illegible] remedies are necessary, [illegible]. They include damming [illegible] creating small lakes, ter[illegible] and turning great areas [illegible] west back into Buffalo grass [illegible] the soil and moisture.

BROTHER HELD In Theft From Vet

On a charge of embezzling government funds, Benjamin F. Macdonald of Roslindale was held in $3000 bail in federal court today.

Macdonald was guardian of the estate of his brother, Ronald, a wounded war veteran. Charges involve government checks.

Though the indictment says he embezzled "thousands of dollars," the three counts refer to two checks for only $75 and one for $25.

KILLS CHILD Plunges to Death

PORK SPILLED By Truck Crash

Ten tons of pork were strewn over the street near Harvard square, Cambridge, today, when a truck and trailer capsized.

The vehicles are owned by the John P. Squire Company and were operated by John J. Murphy of Willoughby street, Somerville.

Winthrop Sq.,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

It is with the most profound sense of appreciation for what the Boston Evening American has done for the welfare of the people of New England that I take this opportunity to congratulate the editor of the American on the completion by that newspaper of thirty-one years of existence as a continuously publishing daily.

Thirty-one years is a long time and the past thirty-one years have been marked by some of the most stirring events in the world's history. Yet, notwithstanding the tempestuousness of the times and the partisan bitterness which has so often clouded the atmosphere on vital public questions, the Boston Evening American has remained a liberal and frankly outspoken tribune—a staunch defender of the rights and privileges of the people.

The American, while published in Boston, is really a New England institution. It is read from the Canadian border to the Hudson River and is numbered among the substantial achievements of that great figure of the journalistic world, William Randolph Hearst. It is a credit to the community in which we live. I desire to add my sentiment to those of many others on the occasion of the American's thirty-first birthday, with the assurance that its constantly widening sphere of influence will continue to expand in the years ahead.

Cordially yours,

James M. Curley

Extending his congratulations to the Boston Evening American on its 31st "birthday," Governor Curley expresses his "most profound sense of appreciation for what the Boston Evening American has done for the welfare of the people of New England."

SOVIET Hearing Plan IRKS TINKHAM

By International News Service

Washington, March 21—A proposal by Rep. Tinkham (R.) of Massachusetts to withdraw American recognition of Soviet Russia today split the House Foreign Affairs Committee into two hostile factions.

After the committee voted to conduct hearings on the proposals behind closed doors, Tinkham, who is a member, announced he would make public all its proceedings.

The committee's decision to hold secret hearings was attributed to opposition by Secretary of State Hull to any resolution withdrawing Soviet recognition. Hull warned the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that any such resolution would complicate existing diplomatic relations between America and the Soviet.

Rep. Fish of New York and Martin of Massachusetts, Republicans, joined Tinkham in protesting against the secret sessions.

WIFE SCREAMS To Trap Husband

Sought since February 17, following an alleged attack on his estranged wife, Victor Plasson, 42, was arrested when he confronted her at Huntington avenue railroad station today.

The wife, Mrs. Adeline Plasson, 40, of Lincoln street, Allston, screamed when she saw him and attracted the attention of police. He was booked on a charge of attack with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill.

RIGHT NAME But Wrong Man

Salem, March 21—On February 21 a man arrested by Danvers police for driving so as to endanger gave his name as "Martin J. Connolly of Lowell."

Today, in answer to a summons, Martin J. Connolly of Lowell appeared in district court. Police Chief John K. McDewell admitted that he was not the man arrested and he was released.

They are still searching for the other "Martin J. Connolly."

Saved by a Hunch

Girl Wakes From Sleep Finds Fiance Gassed

William Smith, 35, of Liberty street, Lynn, was alive today because his sweetheart, Miss Lillian Hannaford, had a 'hunch.'

At 3 a. m. she woke up and had a strange feeling that all was not well with Smith.

She dressed quickly, left her own apartment on Oxford street, and hurried to Smith's address.

She rang the bell to his suite and received no answer. She roused resident of the apartment house. They smelled the gas in the hall and called police.

Police say he would have died of gas poisoning were it not for the "hunch" of Miss Hannaford.

SHIPS MISSING 2 Long Overdue

Gloucester, March 21 (INS)—Fears were felt today for the safety of the two-masted schooner Arthur D. Story, unreported since she sailed from Newfoundland March 3. She was skippered by Captain William L. Nickerson, vice president of the Gloucester Mariners' Association, and carrying a dozen men.

The Norwegian steamer Spec, with a crew of 25, was also believed to have foundered in a gale. She has not been sighted since she left Glasgow for Boston with a cargo of anthracite 34 days ago.

MARTIN INSULL To Be Deported

Detroit, March 21 (INS)—Martin J. Insull, brother of Samuel Insull, one-time Chicago utilities magnate, will be deported to his home in Orilla, Ont., tomorrow, immigration officials said today.

NEW Court Move ON DOGS

INJUNCTION NOW SOUGHT

Cambridge city officials, determined to prevent dog racing in a residential district, today started an unusual action—an attempt to win in superior court an action to offset a Supreme Court order.

Supreme Court Justice Lummus told them they must issue a building permit to the dog track promoters.

Now they will go into the lower court and ask for an injunction.

The new court fight will be based on the claim that under a law of 1856, unrepealed by the new racing law, race promoters have to get permission from mayor and city council, in addition to their state license.

Twomey raised this issue in the Supreme Court, but Judge Lummus said it was irrelevant to the building permit question.

The promoters of all proposed dog tracks must go before the state racing commission tomorrow to show cause why their licenses should not be suspended or revoked.

Building Inspector Ralph W. Tilton of Methuen today received an application for a building permit from George C. Funk for the Essex Greyhound Association, and refused to issue it.

Snow Keeps Alyce In

Cowboy Talk Gives Her a Laugh on Barber

Fall River, March 21—Spring's first day brought only disappointment to Alyce Jane McHenry, 10-year-old Omaha girl whose stomach was once upside-down.

Yesterday, the last day of winter, Alyce was allowed out to enjoy the sunshine.

Today there was no sunshine—only snow and a cold, raw wind. Therefore, Alyce remained indoors.

She got one big laugh out of the day, however. The barber who cut her hair yesterday asked her today if there were many cowboys in Omaha.

"Isn't that funny, mother?" said Alyce. "Why, Omaha is almost as big as Chicago!"

Alyce is eagerly awaiting the arrival of Jimmie Neilson, 13-year-old California boy, who intends coming to Truesdale Hospital to have his inverted stomach righted.

Forget That Bike, Alyce, Here's a Plane

Just to be sure Alyce Jane McHenry, the "upside-down stomach" girl, retains her "air-mindedness," Boston's Junior Birdmen are sending her as a gift this model plane donated by Webb R. Marden of the Aircraft Models Company of America. That shiny new bicycle of Alyce's may be well enough, but the Junior Birdmen are hoping it won't entirely distract the smiling girl convalescent's attention from something more modern in the way of amusement. Loretta O'Brien is admiring the plane. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

PRIEST SLAIN, Another Wounded

Yorkton, Sask., March 21 (AP)—A farmer went wild with a revolver in the Roman Catholic mission here today, killing one priest, seriously wounding another, and then facing capture by police, shot and wounded himself.

The dead priest was the Reverend Father Delforgeo. The Reverend Father Bala was wounded. The farmer is Steve Elash.

U. S. SUES Ruth Chatterton

Los Angeles, March 21 (INS)—An income tax lien was filed in federal court here against Ruth Chatterton, film actress, asserting she still owes the government $11,613 on her 1933 earnings.

SUSPECT Held in Breaks, WOMAN SOUGHT

Beverly, March 21 — Police here today sought to connect Lee J. Gosbee, 45, of Arthur street, with a series of North Shore breaks in which a woman is also suspected.

Gosbee, according to police, admitted that he had twice broken into the summer home of Harrison G. Reynolds. He was turned over to police by George Kilham, caretaker, who said he found him in an attic closet.

Police recovered two clocks stolen from the summer home of Harold J. Coolidge of Boston and Manchester.

COSTS Up 116 Pct SOON

New York, March 21 (AP)—Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer said today once full effects of dollar devaluation are felt, he thought it "likely" the cost of living will have been boosted 116 per cent above present levels.

In an address at the Bankers' Club, the Princeton economist and "money doctor" explained his estimate was based on the assumption gold would decline in the world free markets to its value as of 1926, but even should it not, he looked for a rise in living costs in this country to 50 per cent above present levels.

"These estimates," he explained, "are made on the assumption we shall have no further reduction in the gold content of the dollar and no uncontrolled inflation."

He saw dangers of further inflation by extension of the national debt through borrowing from the banks.

GOLD, U. S. Ready TO SELL ABROAD

By Associated Press

Washington, March 21—Secretary Morgenthau said today the government is prepared to sell gold to foreign countries that can offer an attractive proposition.

Recent sales to the bank of Mexico and to Guatemala, he said, had cleared the way to similar negotiations with other countries.

He said that no conditions had been attached to transactions already consummated.

"We've got all the gold we can possibly use," Morgenthau added, indicating that the government would make no further undue efforts to accumulate the metal.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Despite the handicap of deafness and inability to talk except by means of lip reading, several 16-year-old youths, who have a keen interest in aviation, have become officers in Junior Birdmen squadrons.

They include Ronald Armstrong, of 295 Beacon st., Boston, commander of Squadron 109; Ugo Ficcaglia, of 262 Maverick st., East Boston, commander of Squadron 110; Leon Duccy, of 11 Essex ave., Lynn, commander of Squadron 375; William Doran, of 295 Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, commander of Squadron 112 and Max Sallop, of 30 Lorne st., Dorchester, captain of Squadron 112.

Ronald Armstrong

These boys are fast, earnest and industrious workers and would fit well into offices where duties required no "talking." They recently demonstrated their ability when they volunteered their services for folding materials and stuffing envelopes during a recent flurry of business at Junior Birdmen headquarters.

They, as well as most members of their squadrons, have passed the written Eagle examination and rank high in their standings in Junior Birdmen studies.

LAST R. O. G. Tilt Saturday

Winner of the Dreyfus trophy will be decided Saturday when Junior Birdmen squadrons meet in their sixth and final monthly indoor R. O. G. flying contest at South Armory.

The winner probably will be either Bruno Marchi, of Medford, commander of Squadron 128, or Louis B. Young, of Newton Center, captain of Squadron 200. Louis holds the edge at present on the basis of total time of two winning flights.

As usual, cash prizes will be awarded to first, second and third place winners Saturday. Fourth place winners will be guests of Loew's State Theater to see Wallace Beery in "West Point of the Air," a new and thrilling picture of aviation, opening at that theater Friday. The role is a natural one for Beery because he owns and flies his own plane. Crashes and close escapes are some of the thrills in this film.

The R. O. G. contest will be followed between 1 and 3:30 p. m. by a flying scale contest under the direction of William Rivera. Points will be awarded for detail and for flying time. Kits will be given as prizes.

QUINS Healthy, BRIGHT

"LOVE APPLE SAUCE, EGGS"

(Editor's Note—Following is the fourth and concluding article of a series on the Dionne quintuplets, best-known babies in the world.)

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service).

Callander, Ont., March 21—Those Dionne quintuplets are "normal babies." They are "bright children" who haven't had a cold since they were born last May 28th—almost ten months ago.

I am told this by the one person who should know—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the famous country doctor who has ben treating and caring for them since birth.

From another authoritative source—chief nurse Louise de Kirline—I learn that the babies "love apple sauce and eggs"; that they have no likes or dislikes and that they "take everything easily."

"They are the easiest babies weaned that I ever saw," said Mrs. de Kirline, when interviewed by International News Service at the "Dafoe hospital for the quintuplets."

Dafoe Happy

It's great to see the way Dr. Dafoe looks after the "Quins." He visits them every day, plays with them and acts toward them like a loving father. He has had his worries about them. But now that they are growing stronger and lovelier day by day he is happy over their condition.

The day I visited the hospital with Dr. Dafoe, Yvonne weighed fifteen pounds and six ounces and was the heaviest of the five babies. Marie, then weighing thirteen pounds and seven ounces, was the lightest.

Dr. Dafoe attributed their fine condition to the care they have had. He said:

"They have had fresh air three hours a day all winter. Every morning since they were taken into the nursery last September they have been put out on the front porch in their buggies for three hours each morning and that's why they look so rosy-cheeked and healthy."

Visitors Daily

Six persons can be found at the "hospital" every day. They are Dr. Dafoe, the three nurses—Mrs. De Kirline, Yvonne Lereaux and "Pat" Mullin—the housekeeper, Laurence Clusieux and an orderly named Telsphore Demers. The hospital is open to the public for one hour a day—between 2 and 3 p. m.

"Can you tell the babies apart?" I asked Mrs. De Kirline as I watched Dr. Dafoe chucking the babies under the chin and jollying first one of them and then another.

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed. "Yvonne and Annette are much alike. They have certain little mannerisms, such as the way they wrinkle their noses or make sounds or purse their lips. Cecile has a rounder face than the others and is a little blonder. Emilie has a more pointed face. She has the smallest face and she is very lively. Marie you can't miss—her face is quite different."

GIANT ENGINE Due for B. & M.

The longest locmotive ever in service in New England will be on exhibition at the North Station tomorrow from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

It is the first to arrive of five new fast freight engines for the Boston & Maine.

The locomotives, of the "Mountain" type, are 105 feet long and weight 363 tons each. They carry 20,000 gallons of water and 21 tons of coal and can haul a mile of freight cars at a speed of 45 miles an hour.

HERE FROM FRANCE FOR STORE OPENING

Guest of honor at tomorrow's dedication and opening of the new I. J. Fox building in Washington street will be Mme. Lyolene, famous French couturier and designer. Girls she has trained are to act as models.

6 MODELS Noted Designer AT FOX STORE

Six attractive manikins, wearing the latest Paris dictates for early spring, were in Boston today from New York under the chaperoning of Mme. Lyolene, famous French couturiere and designer.

Mme. Lyolene will be a guest at the new I. J. Fox store in Washington street until she sails for Paris early next week.

The manikins and Mme. Lyolene will greet the women of New England at the new store when it is opened Friday.

Mme. Lyolene has designed an exclusive series of fur coats, suits and cloth coats for I. J. Fox, and the manikins wore the newest.

Among the unusual designs are sleeves on a four-inch yoke, so fitted that when the scarf is untied there is no disarrangement. There are no buttons, hooks or clips and the assembly may be worn with any dress or coat.

Sent to Sing Sing PODERJAY

New York, March 21 (INS)—Captain Ivan Poderjay today was sentenced to two and one-half to five years in Sing Sing penitentiary for his bigamous marriage to Agnes Tufverson, noted woman attorney.

Miss Tufverson has been missing since shortly after the ceremony was performed.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Donellen in general sessions court.

POLICE CLERKS Get Sleuth Workout

With all patrolmen out on duty, 10 police clerks at the North End station were pressed into service today in an attempt to intercept a stolen car in the East Boston tunnel.

The police clerks stopped 100 cars but failed to recover the stolen one. The machine, a 1928 red sedan, owned by Wesley J. Backman, 22 Somerset street, Everett, was stolen in East Boston and reported heading for the North End.

NURSES Endorse OATH

VETERANS ASK LOYALTY

Declaring that at least 99 per cent of the school teachers of Massachusetts were willing to take the oath of allegiance to uphold the state and federal constitutions, Mary A. MacDonald, national commander of World War Nurses today endorsed the teacher's oath bill.

National Commander MacDonald said:

"I know of no reason why any man or woman to whom is entrusted the education of the children of America should hesitate to take an oath of allegiance and support the principles upon which our nation is founded.

"The passage of this bill will aid greatly in the campaign to rid Red propaganda from the classroom.

"Let us separate the wheat from the chaff. The time has come when the 99 per cent of loyal Americans teaching in our schools should no longer be expected to bear the criticism directed at the disloyal minority.

"During the American Legion convention at Miami last fall, members of the World War Nurses organization voted unanimously to aid in any campaign which purpose is for the promotion of Americanism and patriotism."

PROBE Asked of Everett VICE SQUAD

City Councillor Francis P. Byrne of Everett announced today that he would ask District Attorney Warren Bishop to investigate alleged illegal city expenditures for the Everett police vice squad.

Byrne contended the squad, headed by Sergeant Felix A. Dumas, had violated laws applying to expenditures of city departments before passage of the budget.

Bishop is already investigating a complaint of Councillors Enfanto and Doherty that there is a violation of the same law in the employment of three welfare department investigators.

"If Bishop really wants to investigate something real let him look into the squad expenditures under Dumas."

"HEADLIGHTS" On Strange Fish

A strange fish, with "headlights" but no eyes, was brought to the Fish Pier today by the crew of the trawler Tide.

It is 20 inches long and coal black. Extending forward from its head are tentacles which glow at the tips.

Refuses Legacy

Worcester, March 21—The Rev. Samuel Donovan of Peaks Island, Me., will not accept a legacy bequeathed him by the late Mrs. Mary E. Merrill of Lunenberg, it was reported today. He said he would prefer that the money be given to her children.

WINS LEGION CROSS FOR AID TO FRENCH

In recognition of efforts in behalf of French wounded during and since the world war, Mrs. Charles T. Tatman of Salisbury street, Worcester, has just been awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor, France's most coveted civilian decoration. Her husband is a Worcester attorney.

DEFEAT Faces LaFollette RELIEF BOOST

By Associated Press

Washington, March 21—While Senator La Follette (Progessive, Wis.) expounded his contention that vaster expenditures are needed for recovery, Democratic leaders were predicting today that his amendment to increase the 4880 million dollar work relief bill to 9880 million dollars would garner only about 10 votes in the Senate.

Irked by the success yesterday of the two amendments which restrict the wide powers of President Roosevelt to administer the huge fund, administration supporters were pressing for quick passage of the bill without further important changes.

La Follette was to resume today his speech in which he declared that the time when the United States can "drift" out of depressions is past.

WILLIAM BOYD Dies in Hollywood

His greatest success on the legitimate stage was in "What Price Glory." He had played numerous "villain" parts on the screen.

"GOING BELOW" Says Note at Pond

This message provided a mystery for Arlington police today.

Beside the note was a man's gray overcoat.

Flower Show Preparations Keep Leaders Busy

By BETTY ALDEN

UNLIKE THE JUDGES for the coming spring flower show, who will be feted at formal luncheons and ceremonious dinners nearly every day next week, the women who are so actively engaged in the seemingly impossible task of bringing order and beauty out of the welter and chaos of rocks, trees, moss, bags of sand, fences, wire and what-not, have found it necessary to make their noontime repast consist of sandwiches on paper plates and coffee in thermos bottles . . .

BEATRICE DE MENOCAL

Emulating the carpenters and men who are working on the preparations in Mechanics Hall, these society women carry their little lunch basket every day . . . At first this would seem like quite a hardship, but as a matter of fact these informal luncheons are becoming much anticipated occasions . . . Good fellowship reigns and dignified society matrons temporarily cast aside some of the inhibitions of convention and enjoy themselves as much as they did at the old-fashioned Sunday School picnics . . . In fact, the simile is very apt here, as the luncheons are enjoyed in the fragrance of pine needles and pitch, so reminiscent of pine groves on hot summer days . . .

Country Gardens

WITHOUT BENEFIT of fine china, delicate linen and ancestral silver, such prominent social leaders as Mrs. Arthur Rice, Mrs. Lawrence Brown, Mrs. Charles Norton, Mrs. Irving White and Mrs. John Cunningham welcomed the relaxation and respite from hard work at the picnic luncheon yesterday . . .

Descending from their precarious positions atop stepladders, Mrs. John S. Ames, in a bright green smock, and Mrs. John Coolidge joined the group at the rude uncovered table . . . A bright smock of all colors on a rust background and an equally gay bandanna covered Mrs. Roger Warner's dress and hair as she worked diligently . . . pausing only to help us visualize the beauty and majesty which will abound in Mechanics Hall all next week . . .

We left the scene of these energetic preparations filled with visions of cool pine woods, formal bowers of acacias and azaleas, bright little country gardens and Mayflowers hiding their fragrance under dark oak leaves . . . so, it is no wonder that we were in a receptive mood to heed the whispers of the spring winds, as they blew us word that romance is lurking around the home of the Daniel de Menocals of Beacon street . . .

The near future is expected to bring the formal announcement of the betrothal of the petite, dark-haired Beatrice, who made her debut several years ago and has since always maintained her laurels as one of the most individual and exclusive young ladies of our first families . . . Cupid has linked her with a gentleman from the Windy City, but we will not add to the above lines until we receive confirmation or denial . . . Beatrice has occupied herself since her debutante days with modeling from time to time at one of the Back Bay's exclusive shops . . .

She is the niece of Mrs. Allen Forbes, whose name also bespeaks all the dignity of Boston's aristocratic "400" . . .

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Ericsson Bushnell and her family is very prominent in the social set in New York . . . She will be attended by her sister, Mrs. Jack Durant, herself a recent bride . . .

Ronald T. Lyman, Jr., of Beacon street, a cousin of the bridegroom-to-be, and Charles Sexton will be in the usher corps . . . Also Guy Murchie, Jr., Chauncey Stillman, Charles Van B. Cushman and Frederick Frelinghuysen . . . James Parker Cushman will be his brother's best man . . .

Mr. Cushman was graduated from Harvard in 1929 and has been making his home in New York ever since . . . His fiancee attended the Spence School and is very active in the affairs of the Junior League . . . She is gifted with a very sweet singing voice . . .

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Police Find Gun on Melvin

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, she's all of 17, is relating what happened after her French teacher, pretty Constance (Connie) Sinclair, was found shot dead at a desk in her (Miss Sinclair's) apartment.

Julie has startled her mother and interests her father, a lawyer, by telling that she and her boy friend, Dicky Ward, had visited the apartment the previous afternoon, a few hours before the murder.

She had returned a fountain pen which she had borrowed from Miss Sinclair. Newspaper reports make known that the teacher was slain about 10 o'clock that night.

The police went to the apartment upon receipt of a mysterious telephone call informing them that Miss Sinclair had been slain. Julie's young brother, Allen, also a high school pupil, leaves the breakfast table soon after the family starts discussing the tragic news.

At the school later, Police Inspector O'Brien questions Julie concerning the return of the pen, basing his inquiry on notes made during an earlier examination of Mrs. Sardoni who conducted the apartment house tenanted by the slain teacher.

Julie tells the inspector that she talked with Miss Sinclair about a book. Principal Perkins remarks that he found the book on the teacher's school desk that morning and gets permission to return it to the rental store.

Melvin Wright, "the school's problem boy," and the last known caller on Miss Sinclair, is grilled in secret . . . the evening papers feature the victim's last letter, addressed to a "Dear George," who evidently was married.

Then come extras with the news that Hym, Filipino janitor of the apartment house, had vanished the night of the murder! Julie is describing what she noticed at the school the next day:

Mysterious Call

CHAPTER IV

A bunch of the girls at the high school always lunched at the confectionery store across the street. The five of us were sitting around a table, over sandwiches and milk shakes. All we could think to talk about was the murder.

"What I don't see is," said one, "why the police cannot trace that phone call. You know there aren't many getting off a boat at that hour of night."

"That is easy enough, when you think about it," answered another. "Thursday is the night the concerts are given in the Bowl. You know Galli-Curci sang. We went. She sure was grand."

"You mean there were a lot of people from the concert on the boat?"

"Sure! The concerts are great and the admission's only a dollar, you know. There were lots of people on that boat. Probably a number of them made phone calls. In all the rush and crowd, it would be hard even to see anyone making a call, much less to remember what he looked like."

"Who do you suppose did it?"

"That's what the police would like to know," I said.

"Well," said Helen, "I think it was that George's wife. She was fighting with Connie" (we all called our teachers by their first names) "the week before and she was jealous. Connie, by her own letter, didn't do much to calm her down. I bet after George came running over again Sunday, Mrs. George just came over Thursday with a gun in her muff, and—pfoff!"

'Can't Believe It'

"Well, my mother says if Connie was running around with a man she knew was married, she got what was coming to her."

I protested, "I think you girls are cold-blooded to sit here and talk about Connie Sinclair like that. She was young and pretty and cute. You were crazy enough about her last week. Now she's dead—killed. I can't believe it."

After that the girls began talking about the clothes she used to wear, and the jolly things she used to say, and they speculated on her love affairs. In the midst of all this, Patsy Riley came running in, breathless and wild-eyed.

"Girls," she cried, "have you heard the news?"

"No, what?" we all asked at once.

"Melvin Wright is in on the case!"

"No!"

I said nothing. I felt, somehow, that I couldn't tell things I picked up when I was working in the office. I knew, too, that Inspector O'Brien and Mr. Perkins didn't expect me to hear their conversation. I thought probably Patsy was going to tell what happened yesterday.

"Yes!" she continued, "he was the one who visited Connie's apartment at 8 o'clock that night. He says he went there to get her to sign his parole thing, as she had refused that day at school because he had been out three times that week with that awful girl. She refused again, and he knew that meant trouble. So he argued with her for half an hour. But she stuck to it. He says then that he told her what he thought of her, of her pretended friendship for him and all. Then he banged her door and slammed down the stairs, as Mrs. Sardoni said:

"But you don't suppose—"

"That's not all," squealed Patsy triumphantly. "The detective on the case searched his pockets last night and they found something. They're holding him in custody now!"

'He Won't Say'

Believe me, I sat up then, too.

"What did they find?" we almost shouted.

Patsy drew herself up importantly. There was a dead silence. Then she exploded, "A gun!"

"A gun!" we echoed.

"Yes. The same size as the bullet she was killed with. I mean the gun was the same size as the one that fired the bullet. they have sent it and the bullet to San Francisco to be analyzed or whatever they do with it."

"Where does he say he got it, and why?" I asked.

"He won't say."

And that was that. About two-thirds of the school decided Melvin was guilty. All his past history was dragged up, and all the trouble with Miss Sinclair, until I almost believed it myself.

The papers were so full of this break that night that little was said about Hym and his disappearance.

The next morning there was still another development. Mr. Sinclair had arrived, and he had immediately inquired if Bruce Lloyd were in town. That was a new name which sent the papers, or their reporters, scurrying all over to find out about him.

The police, too, were investigating. Mr. Sinclair said immediately that Bruce Lloyd was the man Constance had intended to marry.

He was a very fine man, apparently, although Mr. Sinclair had met him only once, and he lived in San Francisco. The father expressed himself as surprised, shocked, that he had not come immediately to St. Joseph when he read of Connie's death.

It didn't take long to find him in the city. He came that evening to meet Mr. Sinclair and the police.

He expressed shock and grief and explained he had been out of town for a day or so. The papers ran big cuts of him, showing a tall, handsome, blond young man, with clear blue eyes and a fine mouth. No one, not even Mrs. Sardoni, remembered seeing him before. And as Helen said, he was not the sort of man you would be likely to forget.

'Decline to Say'

It did seem awfully strange that Connie had never talked to anyone about him. He was the ideal fiance that any girl would be proud to show off. The teachers across the hall said she often went to the city for dinner, returning on the very late boat, and also that she spent many Saturdays there.

They supposed she had gone there to meet him, which supposition proved to be the case. But that was early in the fall, during the first weeks of school in August and September. For the last month, these trips had been infrequent.

The most startling statement the papers made was that the police and Mr. Lloyd both admitted he had refused to answer two questions.

"Did you and Miss Sinclair have a misunderstanding?" he had been asked.

"We met last summer while I was on my vacation and she on hers. We became engaged. I think that by October both of us felt it had been a mistake. We did not quarrel, however, but we saw each other less frequently."

"And did your feeling that it was a mistake arise from any knowledge you had of a man named George?"

Mr. Lloyd hesitated, then he said, "I decline to say."

But in spite of the great kick the gossips got out of that, his next refusal was even more sensational.

"Now, Mr. Lloyd, where were you on the night of October 20?"

"I was out of town."

"So we understand. Where?"

"I cannot say; I'm sorry, but I just can't say."

Read in the next instalment further revelations—possible clues in teacher's slaying.

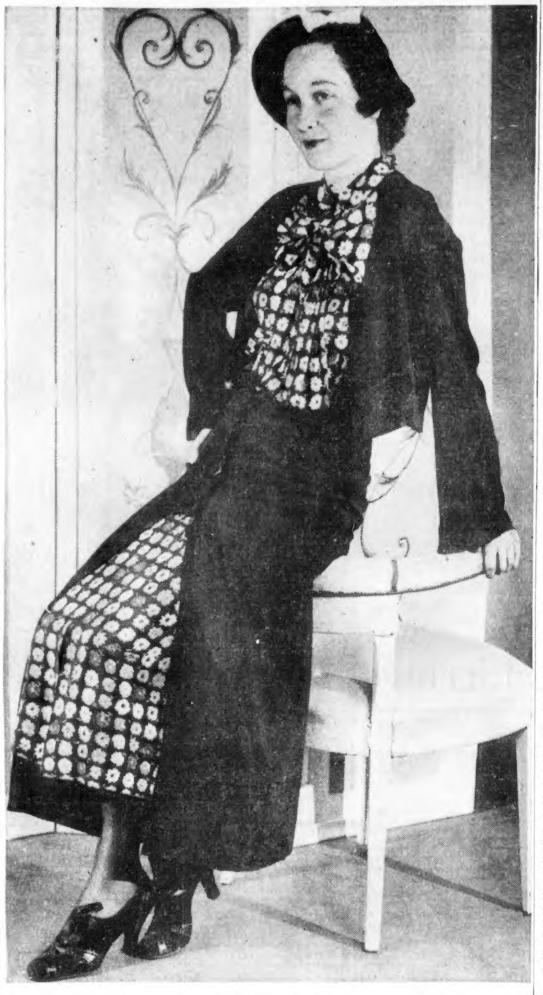
Redingote or Not



By Annice Brink

THE ORIENTALS with their tricks of layer dressing have been far outdistanced in ingenuity by the designers of Spring frocks here in the Occident. Add the redingote-frock illustrated above to the list of budget fashion finds in the putter-on and taker-off class. A tree-bark crepe frock of a really delightful spaced flower print—with nice touches like a pleated jabot tie and well-cut slim lines—is accompanied by a separate plain crepe skirt and a jaunty jacket. Here you see all three assembled to make a redingote. Easy enough to figure out all the combinations possible.

Miss Katharine Baker of Belmont, active and charming debutante of the past season, models.

The ensemble is from a Boston shop; for further details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Long Shot Wins

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The chance of its success may be remote but it may be the only hope.

North, Dealer.

North:
♠ J 10 9
♡ A K 10
♢ A 9
♣ A J 10 7 3

West:
♠ 7 4
♡ Q J 7 3
♢ K Q J 7
♣ Q 8 2

East:
♠ 8
♡ 8 5 4 2
♢ 8 6 5 4 2
♣ K 6 4

South:
♠ A K Q 6 5 3 2
♡ 9 6
♢ 10 3
♣ 9 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣ (1)	Pass	4 ♠ (2)	Pass
4 N T	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) With four-plus honor-tricks and neutral support for the spades, North's strong rebid is justified.

(2) South, with a seven-card solid spade suit must make a slam try after his partner's strong bidding.

West opened the King of diamonds, dummy winning with the Ace. A trump was next led to the Queen and a heart returned.

Mr. Troyer saw that a club loser and a diamond loser were unavoidable unless the heart suit could furnish a discard.

This would be possible only in the event West held both the Queen and Jack of Hearts—a twenty-five per cent chance.

The play could not possibly lose, however, since even if the ten were finessed and lost, one of the high hearts would still furnish a discard for one of the losers.

West played low, hoping declarer would not take the double finesse.

The ten was finessed and held the trick. The Ace and King were cashed, declarer discarding a club.

The Ace of clubs was cashed and a low club ruffed. Dummy was entered with the ten of trumps and another club ruffed.

Dummy was entered again with the Jack of trumps and an established club was led, upon which declarer discarded his losing diamond. Mr. Troyer thus made seven-odd.

He could have been held to six-odd had West put up a heart honor on the first heart lead since in that event one of the vital trump entries would have had to be overtaken by declarer for a second heart finesse.

West, of course, did not care about the overtrick and the low heart play was the chief hope of defeating six.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Beauty Kit

By The Beauty Editor

IF A FINAL buffeting by March winds has left your face looking as though it had been through a tough winter—don't despair.

All it probably needs is a little coddling and common sense care. If you are a busy woman, and expensive, tedious facials have no place in your scheme of things, you'll need a few sterling preparations on your dressing table to whip it back into shape.

When these preparations come in a gay, green-and-gold kit and are ready at a moment's notice to do a thorough job of cleansing and lubricating, so much the better. And when the price is very reasonable it fills the bill completely.

If you are anxious to acquire that salon-cared-for-look, with a minimum of time and expense, this special spring package will do it very nicely. It contains five preparations from a famous Fifth avenue salon, including a jar of one of the best nourishing creams we have ever tried. (This cream alone in its regular size sells for $5.)

The cleansing cream is one of the two-purpose variety, and actually accomplishes the work of two creams. It has the marvelous penetrating virtues of all higher priced creams and replenishes natural oils to dry skins.

In addition there is a soothing liquid freshener, a bottle of a special nourishing oil, and a box of a radiant, peach-bloom powder.

To learn the name of this reasonable priced kit sponsored by a famous Fifth avenue house, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

Tomato Recipes

By MARTHA LEE

THEIR FACES are red—these ruddy tomatoes—but they have nothing to blush about. They aren't aware of their popularity, perhaps, but actually they're invited to more meals than any other vegetable.

Just look over your favorite recipes, and see how many of them include tomatoes in some form or other.

Soups, sauces, meats, vegetables, salads, cocktails and desserts—they are all made better by that delicious and healthful blushing tomato.

Canned tomatoes, of course, are always of the blushing type. They have been picked from the pick of the crop at their prime, and they have been quickly put into cans so that their natural goodness in preserved. It is these canned tomatoes that we have come to rely on as an all-year round treat. Have you tried the following simple way of using canned tomatoes?

SCALLOPED TOMATOES SCOTCH STYLE

Bring to boiling the contents of one No. 2 can (2½ cups) of tomatoes, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar and a few grains of pepper. Add one-half cup of quick-cooking rolled oats and pour into a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven, 375 deg. F., for 30 to 40 minutes. This serves six persons.

SCALLOPED CORN AND TOMATOES

Arrange equal measures of cooked corn and stewed or canned tomatoes in layers in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle salt, pepper and melted butter over each layer. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) until the food is hot and the crumbs are brown (15 to 20 minutes).

TOMATO BREAD STUFFING

(Use to stuff Fish or Meat)

1 cup soft bread crumbs or cubes
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 small onion, minced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup tomato pulp, drained

Place bread crumbs in a mixing bowl. Toss lightly with a fork while adding the melted fat, the onion, salt, pepper and tomato.

SHAMPOO Hair OFTEN

Question—Do you advise frequent shampooing? I have always had a shampoo every three weeks but I notice that my hair gets oily and dirty in about ten days' time. I have hesitated about shampooing it as often as that, because I have been advised that frequent washings are bad. Is this true?

Helen F. Braintree

Answer—Frequent shampooing of the hair is not injurious, any more that daily cleansing of the skin. If hair is subjected to considerable atmospheric dirt, it should be laundered every ten days. Use a mild, bland soap. Instead of shaving and melting it, place a small bar in a pint Mason jar, cover with boiling water, and let stand for three days. The contents will be sufficent for six or seven shampoos.

Question: Is a red nose due to faulty digestion and diet? Certain cosmetics, even powder, seem to irritate it and throw it into a ruddy glare. I am careful about my diet, yet the condition does not improve. E. F. E.
Nashua, N. H.

Answer: A change of diet may help. Acids, spicy dishes, rich pastries and condiments should be avoided. Eat plenty of vegetables and salads, drink milk and fruit juices. Tepid water is best for washing; warm or cold excite the capillaries. Ointment of zinc oxide is soothing and healing. I have a recipe for home-made lotion for a very red nose which you may have by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Department, Boston Evening American.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Tips for Girls Who Want to Be Popular

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SO MANY letters come to me from girls who tell me they are not popular. They go to dances, but no one asks them to dance. Then the music gets into their toes, and in sheer desperation they dance with each other.

Leila writes:

All normal girls want to be popular. It's the most natural and reasonable of wishes. Let's inquire into the subject, and see why it is that some girls have to dance with each other when the music gets into their toes, and others have so many "cut-ins" that dancing is just an exchange of partners.

To pursue this question: Is popularity a gift of nature: are some girls born popular? If not, how does one acquire this gift of the gods?

In the first place, it's never the sluggish, selfish girl who is popular—unless she happens to be divinely beautiful and then all rules fail. The live-wire girl, full of vitality, resource and common sense, is always popular. And common sense is not to be passed lightly in considering this question. Some girls are so utterly bereft of it that they stumble from one blunder to another, and retire from the scene.

Warmheartedness counts immensely, too. People love a girl who has sympathy for others, and who is not always thinking of herself, her moods and what she is pleased to call her "sensitiveness."

A resourceful girl is always popular—one who can rescue a party that's going on the rocks from sheer boredom, and can suggest some game, trick or scheme that will make a go of it. That's much better than sitting around criticizing and saying how dull the party is.

The ability to do things, especially cook things, is so highly important that perhaps I should have put that first. A girl who can turn out a good supper from a chafing dish or a two-burner electric grill, or even the old family range, is bound to be in demand by the stop-look-and-listen crowd, who can only follow after her and never originate.

I knew a girl very well, who married a man in the foreign service because she knew how to make perfect coffee, and scramble eggs to the queen's taste. The man knew he had nothing but his salary, and he felt that a charming girl who could get up an impromptu supper, after a show or on Sunday evenings would be a great asset in his career. And she has been that—for he is now in the diplomatic corps!

A good dancer is always a social success, and the girl who plays a good game of bridge or tennis gets more invitations than the young lady who makes for the nearest sofa and just sits.

The girl who is clever with clothes is apt to be popular. She's a credit to the young man who takes her out, and a decorative figure at any party. She can make over an old dress so that it will look as well, almost, as a new one.

And lastly, the popular girl is never sentimental or tiresomely personal in her relations with other people. She does not tell you about her own or her family's troubles. She's agreeable.

And please remember this—she doesn't say spiteful things about other girls, or act as if she could qualify for president of the Cat Club.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We're both in the same class at night school. It's an awful squeak for me to pay my room rent and get a couple of meals a day, as I have a very poor job, and the best my family can do for me is to send an occasional $5.

I took this girl skating during the cold weather, and on the way home suggested a cup of coffee at a chain restaurant. We had coffee and cakes, which was the best I could do on my very slim budget. To do that I went without breakfast the next morning.

Gossip around the class tagged me as a "tightwad" because I hadn't done any better in the way of a treat. Since this episode I've been coldly polite to the young lady and haven't responded to any of her overtures for making up. Don't you think I'm right?

SO-CALLED "TIGHTWAD."

When I get a letter like yours, I'm convinced of the inconsistency of human nature. Almost any girl would be glad to go skating with a boy and be appreciative of this treat on the way home. But to gossip about coffee and cakes is just too common.

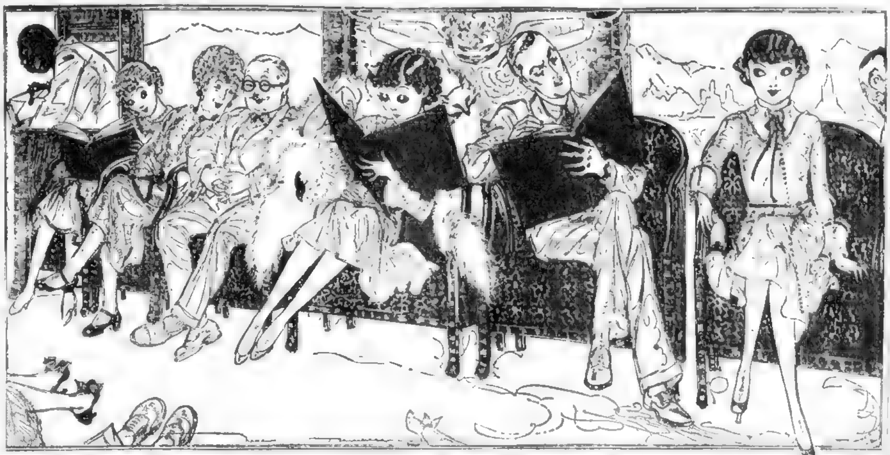
Two Happy Ostriches—One Honeymoon!

By Nell Brinkley



EVERY young person looking at this picture will tell you in a second that the young man and girl in the center, pretending to be engrossed in their books, were married today and wish nobody to know it. This picture illustrates most beautifully Nell Brinkley's ability to tell a long and beautiful story in a picture without any words.

The ostrich with his head in the sand deceives nobody. The young honeymoon couple also deceive nobody. But how HAPPY they are! How ecstatically they will rush together, both talking at once, when they find themselves alone again, and tell each other, "Nobody suspected that we were newlyweds!"

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 298

AS I STOOD outside the door behind which Lee Chow was being guarded, I felt as if I were in that old and common nightmare where one is trying to shriek, and cannot make a sound.

My fists were going through the motions of a tattoo upon the door, and my lips were framing the words, "Hugh! Hugh! Quick!"

But my terror over the disappearance of Junior and Roderick from the room off the nursery must have paralyzed my ear drums, for I could hear neither my knocking nor my frantic calls.

Yet they must have been audible inside the room, for, just as I reached the nadir of despair the door swung open and Hugh Grantland caught me in his arms as, utterly spent, I swayed and would have fallen but for his swift action.

Behind him I was conscious of my father's anxious face, and the two men spoke as with one voice.

"What has happened? Tell me."

IN HUGH'S ARMS

Vaguely I knew that Hugh's arms were round me, holding me closely, safely, and for an instant I rested against his shoulder, too utterly exhausted to move or speak. Then a cry tore from my throat, and I straightened and put my fists against Hugh's chest in an attempt to stand erect.

"The children!" I gasped. "Roderick and Junior! I can't find them anywhere! They're not in the room where they went to sleep."

I heard a deep breath of relief from Hugh, and he took his arms from around me and put his hands over mine, which were clenched against his chest.

"You mustn't be frightened," he said, with the soothing manner one would use to a child. "No doubt they planned to get [illegible] of their own. You never can tell what boys of that age have in their heads—and it will be an easy matter to find them."

But my father's voice was sharp with anxiety as he pushed past us.

"Just now," I faltered, my fears intensified at the sight of his terror. "Faith wakened me when she cried for her breakfast, and when I was giving her her bottle I asked Lillian to look at the boys. I waited two minutes, and when she did not come back I went to their room and it was empty."

I heard my voice rising in a crescendo of terror and Hugh's clasp tightened on my hands.

"Steady!" he whispered. "I tell you the boys are all right. I'd stake anything on it."

"Where is Lillian?" my father asked next.

"I heard her downstairs, going from room to room calling the boys," I answered.

"I'll find her first," my father said. "Hugh, Lee Chow's safe enough, isn't he, if we lock the door?"

GUARD FOR BABY FAITH

"I'll stake my life that he won't waken for hours," Hugh replied. "That was a stiff hypo I gave him."

"Then you and Margaret come down as soon as you have locked this door," my father commanded. "But wait! What have you done about Baby Faith?"

"She's in her crib with her bottle," I answered faintly, "and the doors and windows are all locked."

"Then you either must go back there, or get someone to go in there with her," my father said firmly, as he walked quickly to the stairway.

"Oh, Hugh," I breathed. "I must hunt for the boys. I can't go back to the nursery."

"Of course, you can't," he said, and his arms went around me for a second. "We'll call somebody."

"Can I help?" Avis Arlen's voice asked sweetly.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

You don't like criticism. You may have trained yourself to laugh it off or take it gamely.

You may pretend you want "constructive criticism" but, inwardly, any kind of criticism hurts and angers you.

You think it's unnecessary, unfair. You're sure you'd be a better and braver person without it.

But you're wrong. You need criticism. Even when it's undeserved—actually malicious—criticism is a privilege and an opportunity.

FOR YOU'D NEVER KNOW YOURSELF OR FREE YOURSELF OR IMPROVE YOURSELF WITHOUT CRITICISM.

We humans are never quite honest in our view of ourselves. We always look at our own conduct through a rosy veil of Extenuating Circumstances.

No matter how contemptible our conduct may be, we always can and always do find some excuse for ourselves.

The other fellow doesn't see the noble motive under the meanie act. He sees your conduct as the world sees it—in its simple, unadorned cussedness. And comments accordingly. Which, of course, raises Cain with your conceit.

BUT THAT'S ACTUALLY THE FRIENDLIEST FAVOR HE COULD SHOW YOU. For the greatest menace in your life is your own conceit. More lives are wrecked by their own conceit than by all the diseases and disasters combined.

Criticism gives you a chance to see yourself as others see you.

Don't kid yourself—their audit is always at least thirty-three and a third per cent right! And you'll improve your own prospects amazingly if you'll accept that report and act upon it.

You can measure a man's caliber and forecast his future pretty accurately by the way he takes criticism. A really big person admits his fault readily.

"But suppose the criticism is really untrue? Aren't there people who like to hurt—who say unkind things without any foundation?"

There are. But if you're wise you'll profit by even their remarks.

The truth DOES "set you free." And criticism DOES reveal the truth—either about you or the other fellow.

Don't dodge criticism. Don't resent it. It's always a Big Break. Welcome it. Dare to look into the door it opens before you.

Books on Parade

—By MILES ALDEN—

SING SING DOCTOR—by Amos O. Squire, M. D.—Doubleday, Doran.

The horror of an electrocution is something no man can forget. Dr. Squire has witnessed some 138 executions during his 30 years of service at Sing Sing and the memory of them serves him well in his argument against capital punishment.

But the book itself is neither morbid nor maudlin. With a fine understanding, flavored with a sense of humor, Dr. Squire has written vividly of all that goes on behind those famous walls.

His observations of the countless prisoners who have passed under his care are a valuable contribution to criminology.

In the past few years several important works have been written on this prison. Their effect on the treatment of prisoners cannot yet be measured, but it is significant that both Dr. Squire and Warden Lawes denounce capital punishment as ineffective to curb crime and degrading to society.

But Dr. Squire's argument does not prejudice his attitude toward the prison as a whole.

A WORD ABOUT RICE KRISPIES from W. K. KELLOGG

OFTEN the introduction of a new product benefits many phases of American life. This has been our experience with Kellogg's Rice Krispies.

We had a double objective in developing Rice Krispies. First, to create a delicious cereal that would appeal to every one. Second, to help mothers in their task of getting children to take sufficient milk. It was thought that a different type of cereal—one that would snap, crackle, and pop when milk or cream was poured into the bowl—would stimulate appetites.

This was true. Today, people of all ages are enjoying Rice Krispies. The convenience of serving this ready-to-eat cereal has resulted in shorter hours for mothers — less time spent in the kitchen — more moments of leisure.

The success of Rice Krispies has opened a tremendous new market for the American farmer. The Kellogg Company has become one of the world's largest buyers of American-grown premium rice. The Kellogg Company also uses many millions of bushels of corn and wheat every year.

American industry also benefits. Thousands of people are kept busily employed in the manufacture and marketing of Kellogg Cereals.

We are pleased that Rice Krispies have added a tempting new ready-to-eat cereal to the American table, and have delighted millions of mothers and children. We are particularly happy that this has helped thousands of people to have better jobs, and to enjoy life more.

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

By Norman Archibald

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as private first class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudon, the American aviation center, we helped build the camp and lay miniature railroads—in the mud. Without any previous training we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. Then one day I made a "solo" flight. How easy it was! A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. We practiced shooting at targets. Flying our planes we shot at a sleeve, six feet long, towed by another plane.

The French pilots of the towing Caudrons had no confidence in our self-styled methods. Frightened at reckless firing and with stray bullets whizzing near them they would cut loose the target.

The Wings of His Plane Collapsed

Floating down, it would be [illegible] lost in the woods and our hits unrecorded. We complained.

Trouble again and for a time this shooting practice was suspended. When it was resumed the wily French pilots flew in and about the clouds to hide the target.

Large observation [illegible] small Nieuports [illegible] decorating the sky [illegible] made Cazeaux a scene of [illegible] but menacing activity.

Close Call

Many were killed, others seriously hurt and still others [illegible] injured, but it was here, for the first time in all my [illegible] I ever saw or knew [illegible] ing from a crash in a Nieuport resulting from a spin.

A plane when 150 feet in the air went into a spin and with terrific speed nosed into the [illegible]. We rushed over to pick up the [illegible] but the pilot crawled from the wreckage with only a skinned nose.

Beauchamp had a close call.

A ditch, recently dug on the edge of the field had piles of dirt on its edges. Gliding into the field and leveling off to land, Beauchamp saw another plane gliding down across his path. To avoid a collision he opened his motor.

At full speed his landing gear hit the dirt. The plane [illegible] hurdled the ditch and with a resounding [illegible] landed upside down. Rushing over we found Beauchamp crawling out [illegible]. He took the blame for the crashed plane but never thought of his more anxious [illegible].

As the major in charge of our group came up [illegible] Beauchamp's expression [illegible] expected a reprimand.

Saluting, he stood [illegible] at attention.

"Congratulations on being alive," said the major, extending his hand.

This aerial gunnery work was interspersed with other branches of learning. Classes were devoted to the theory of shooting.

On the ground we shot flesh pistols, carbines, machine guns and shotguns.

French Aces

Also swift motor boats and [illegible] dropping [illegible] skimmed [illegible] lake as we potted at [illegible] ing and stationary targets.

Several girls from the surrounding neighborhood were [illegible] tesses and they were [illegible] amused at our [illegible].

"Oui, monsieur." She trotted off and, returning with a glass of water, said, "Voila!" She was learning the ways of the American aviators!"

Dinner over we sat [illegible] pling different [illegible] ing. But, the days w[illegible] we[illegible] were tied and after [illegible] routine of swearing and [illegible] gun powder on our [illegible].

French Aces, decorated for shooting down five or more enemy planes at the Front, were at this field. Arrangements were made to compare our skill with theirs.

Two flyers took off, a French Ace and one of our pilots. At a [illegible] height they [illegible]

[illegible] tossed and tumbled but neither gained an appreciable advantage. What an exhibition! Each demon[illegible]

To higher altitudes they soared in a continual battle for supremacy. Suddenly, without warning or apparent reason, the wings of the American's plane collapsed and it fell like a stone. A deathly roar.

The nose of the plane dug deep into the soft earth and the pilot was instantly killed.

Hair Shines

"Un de nos freres aussi," he said. "Un brave Americain! Un brave et glorieux aviateur."

* * *

We anticipated a whole day, evening and the following day, of sheer fun and laziness.

"Going to Arcachon?"

"Yep!" and I polished my boots till they shone like glass.

"Thirty-six hours?"

"Yep!"

And I [illegible] mirror [illegible] the barracks [illegible].

"What you going to do, Stiles, play Postoffice?"

"Sure, and Musical Chairs and then some," laughs Stiles, splashing his smooth young face and neck with cold water, and THEN SOME . . ."

We were [illegible]. Our flying [illegible] notes on our [illegible].

"All aboard for Arcachon."

Stiles and I, laughing, climb in.

Beautiful Arcachon snuggling tight on the shores of the Bay of Biscay. A former playground for the French, it was now a Paradise for the American aviator. The air was warm and [illegible].

The breeze was cool and salty. We went to a hotel, rented a room overlooking the beach, and laughed at each other as we preened ourselves before the mirror before we started out for our destination, a cafe.

A few drinks. We decided to [illegible] swim [illegible] we sprawled [illegible] sand and swam through the cool, green surf.

"This is the life!" we laughed and swam.

"Yes, siree! This is the life," we repeated nonsensically, but somehow it fell a bit flat.

For although our leave had just begun we could almost hear the clock tick away the precious hours. We were alive and free as meadow-larks but, seriously mindful of what the next day at the flying field might bring, we wanted to be terribly alive.

We did not want to rest for a moment. We wanted to hurry, to do something, to crowd and pack every hour with activity and snatch at every crumb of [illegible] pleasure.

It is mid-afternoon. On an open veranda back from the street we sit at a round, marble table. Three other flyers join us. We order some drinks and talk and laugh.

Two girls at a nearby table attract our attention. One about [illegible] is far from bashful and her glances [illegible] in our direction at the table [illegible].

The other, much younger [illegible] pretty, modest and truly shy [illegible] innocence she watches her companion's every flirtatious gesture with profound admiration and then, plainly blushing, she, too, smiles at the American aviators.

"I know her," boasts one.

"The hell you do?" we question, but, to our surprise, he joins their table and, after a few teasing moments, brings them back with him.

Her dark brown hair is wavy and moist young curls cling to her neck. When she laughs her brown eyes sparkle jet while her white teeth seem even whiter than her dress which has little puffed sleeves and is fashioned of stuff which is sheer and yet crispy.

Hatless, she carries a soft blue scarf which now she throws over her arms and then drapes around her throat in studied carelessness. The total ensemble would serve as a provocative inspiration for a modern Reynolds.

"She lives in a villa high upon the hill," someone whispers.

"And where is Papa?"

We order more drinks, in which she joins us while Guerlain, the petite soeur who is just [illegible] a lemonade made with [illegible] water.

"She says he's in Paris. A wine merchant . . ."

"Well, he better stay home," we laughed meaningly.

The young wine widow revels [illegible] attentions and conversation. She is a rascal, although evidently a person of breeding and [illegible] background, is having her [illegible] thoroughly enjoying it, and [illegible] herself to [illegible] the old bromide 'C'est la guerre.'

She sips her lemonade and, choking, gets the hiccoughs. We all [illegible] that the only one not drinking to get the hiccoughs, and, ordering more drinks, we invite our new friends to dine with us.

"Mais non, Messieurs. You dine dine with me."

It is settled. All could, oui, and bring any other aviators . . . but only aviators.

"Au revoir" until seven.

Stiles and I stroll to the hotel. Another shave, for we feel untidy after the early morning's scraping. Another drink. A bath.

We chatter, laugh, dust our boots, change our linen and, as the sun slips into the Bay of Biscay start for the evening's fun.

Her villa was white. Tight to the hillside it seemed held aloft by a spacious lawn attractively planted with shrubs and flowers outlined in the moonlight.

Loud talking, singing, and raucous laughter sounded its way through tightly drawn blinds as we rang the bell.

The door, noisily unlocked, was held slightly open and a maid pointed to another door where we were supposed to enter.

On either side wall hung matching mirrors with carved gilded frames and directly ahead an arched doorway led into the main salon. This room was filled with aviators.

We did not bring along any friends but, it was plain to see, someone had and as our hostess led the way into another room I [illegible].

"Just look at her, Archie," said Stiles.

She was standing at the head of a [illegible] seating her guests. Her hair [illegible] raven black in the candle light [illegible] was a diamond [illegible] and she wore several [illegible] bracelets.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Dreenlomane's Bard Sings Paean for Dan O'Mahoney

NEVER BEFORE HAVE I LENT this hallowed space. Yet, still being within the octave of St. Patrick's, I turn it over to the schoolmaster of Dreenlomane, Ballydehob, County Cork, Ireland.

This is his writing below, not mine. In it he describes the scene, background and surroundings amid which Dan O'Mahoney, the youthful Irish wrestler, was reared.

Austen Lake

I print it, not so much for that, as for the quaint Gaelic lilt of the native countryman, the inherited strain of minstrelsy that makes Irish folk rear back on their hooks and sing of heartbreak, the wistful national quality that bears the perfume of melancholy and the wholesome earthiness of a people who work the land and harvest dreams. Take it away, John Barry!

The Schoolmaster's Anthem

"ON A HILLTOP, BLEAK AND BARE, among the uplands of southwest Cork is a white-washed farmstead, thick-walled and firmly slated to withstand the fierce gales that blow chill from an eminence lying to the north, or that rush of hurricane gusts through a cleft in the circle of the hills.

"In the valley below the husbandman unceasingly toils. Along the winding road and hedge rows farm carts rumble and rugged men wrest from a grudging soil a livelihood.

"In the moors of a starlit night the dog-fox and vixen cry thin ribbons of faraway sound and the silence of the sleeping valley is broken by the whir of the gowreen roe.

"A stretch of rolling moor, lush with meadowsweet and thyme and ended by the hill known as Mt. Corrin, rises beyond the stout walled cottage.

THE O'MAHONEY MANSE

"Afar, from the hills, yet clear, show the wild Atlantic, Cape Clear Isle and the Fastnet rock. Only a little way from the farmstead is the ruined, ivy-mantled castle of the O'Mahoney clan, a clan that history authoritatively states, never dipped knee in servility to Dane or Saxon.

Young Cubs, Old Giants

"HERE AT THE BREAST OF NATURE, breathing the sweet breath of the mountain, young Danno first saw the light of day. In the open fields he tumbled and wriggled with his brothers, stout lads all, and the hills echoed back his infant shouts. Here, as he grew, Danno's father showed his son the manner of whirling a hammer and the trick of the wrist's parting push.

"Here the Big Man taught his boys to leap the bar, himself an all-round champion who could jump gracefully as a deer.

"On the same meadow, in the cool of evenings, he taught the gorsoon of the family, Paddy, later to be interschool champion, the niceties of pace like a staghound from the leash at the word 'Go.'

"By the platter-stone hearth and the peat blaze, the elder man, learned in folklore, fired his lads with tales of the mighty men of the Fianna, of Finne MacCool, Oscar and Osheen and thus, unspoiled, grew up Danno, on plain fare of his father's fields.

McKechnie Predicts Braves Will Climb

TRIBAL BOSS HAPPY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21—Will McKechnie, the dour Scot, who by his wits alone has raised the Braves to respectable positions in several pennant races, will not admit the first division is a goal beyond the reach of his 1933 Braves.

"We finished fourth a year ago, when we were short handed from the very start of the season; indeed before the season actually opened.

"The fact alone that we have better reserves this season, even though we may not have strengthened our front line, is sufficient to rate us at least as high as we were a year ago.

MALLON STARS

"Consider the Braves a year ago this time. We had no second baseman. The Rabbit was in the hospital nursing a broken leg.

"I was considering breaking up my outfield to strengthen the infield, contemplating a shift of either Berger, Mowry or Lee to second base.

"In addition, Ben Cantwell was under the weather and subsequently proved of little value to the team until late in the season.

"Now Cantwell is fully recovered, and appears capable of another season such as 1933 when he won 20 games.

"The entire pitching staff is fairly sound, although we could use another starting hurler. If Bobby Brown comes through, anything is possible.

"Today Bill Lewis gives us additional strength behind the plate. Les Mallon is proving a find, and Joe Coscarart is capable of being the outstanding rookie of the year.

BABE BIG HELP

"I know he is an accomplished third baseman. He also can play shortstop. All he needs is a little work at second base to make him a rounded utility man.

"There's no need to mention the aid Babe Ruth will give us. He adds the big punch we needed in our lineup. Moreover he'll prove an inspiration to the rest of the players.

"Those four, Ruth, Lewis, Mallon and Coscarart, represent strength which we lacked in three departments last season."

The measure of that strength will tell the story of the 193[illegible] Braves.

Bobby Wins

The Real McCoy

Brittle Hands Halted Climb of Latest Fistic Ace

(This is the third of a series of articles on "The Real McCoy," life story of Al McCoy, New England's latest boxing ace.)

By Sam Cohen

Dundee was then middleweight champion of the world, having won the title from Lou Brouillard here. Then he defeated Andy Callahan in defense of the crown.

In fact, on no less than two occasions he hit the titleholder flush on the chin with his right hand and Dundee started wobbling around the ring.

But McCoy, lacking experience, failed to take advantage of these opportunities, and Dundee came back to outscore him.

McCoy then started his parade to fame all over again. He took on Harry Allen in Bangor Me., and squashed him in the eighth. His next bout was with [illegible] a dangerous puncher. McCoy won the decision.

His next efforts were a phenomenal iron man stunt. In the short space of five days he knocked out his ancient foe, Tony Celli, in Salem, and then flattened Norman Conrad, both in five heats.

However, in knocking out Conrad, McCoy damaged his hand and was forced to push a match with Al Gainor a week ahead.

This bout took place at Braves Field. Gainor gained the decision because McCoy was forced on a bicycle after damaging his hand in the first round.

However, McCoy almost plucked this one out of the fire in that first heat, too. As Gainor moved in McCoy cut loose with a left hand punch that didn't travel six inches.

Gainor fell headlong over McCoy who had ducked after landing the blow and was fortunate to get up before the count.

This blow damaged McCoy's left duke and now he was forced to defend himself with a couple of shattered hands, which [illegible] earned him rounds of jeers instead of cheers. The public, ignorant of his plight, urged him to fight, convinced that he could knock out the dusky warrior.

McCoy chalked this one up as another bitter disappointment and went into retirement again so his damaged dukes could heal.

(Concluded Tomorrow)

CONFIDENT

Al McCoy, New England's latest fistic sensation, doesn't mind telling the world he will soon become champion.

TOYS With GIANTS

CRONIN'S OWN DISCOVERY

By Joe Cashman

Jack Wilson, the youth in question, has twice toyed with Bill Terry's slugging Giants, and he'll do the same with American rivals unless all signs are misleading.

Pilot Joe lost no time in introducing his find to Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins, sending the kid in to twirl the last five frames of the mid-week contest with the New Yorkers.

Jack breezed through the test like a thoroughbred, yielding only three singles as the Sox punched a 15-to-3 victory, featured by an eight-run rally in the seventh inning.

UP WITH A'S

The first batter to face him got a cheap single. But the hostiles didn't score.

The Portland product threw out Partell, fanned Leiber and retired Ott on an easy fly to send the Sox executives' faith in Cronin's judgment soaring to a new high.

Every other player on the squad was handed the boy boss. He put over the deal for Wilson himself, giving Bill Cissell in exchange.

The modest Mr. Cronin, however, declines to take any credit for the trade. He reveals he never saw Jack in action on the Coast and bought him solely on the recommendation of a friend in 'Frisco.

A broad shouldered, black-haired youth of 23, who stands an inch under six feet and weighs 185 pounds, Wilson is receiving his second major league trial.

He was up with the A's for a brief spell last season. A sore arm resulted in a return ticket to Portland.

NEWARK TODAY

He came down here without the slightest idea of whether soreness had left his arm. Fortunately both for himself and the Sox, he found the wing in perfect shape.

Jack's best bet is a fast ball, but he has a nice curve and a fine change of pace. And he displays all the poise and smartness of a veteran on the hill.

They'll tackle the Newark Bears at Clearwater this afternoon and spend the night at St. Pete, where they'll play the first of the five-game series with the Braves on the morrow.

Trojans Beaten by Hebrews, 36-31

New York, March 21—Philadelphia Hebrews had increased their lead in the American Basketball League today as a result of their victory over Boston Trojans, 36-31.

Boston at one point was leading 24-20, but weakened under the Hebrews' closing drive.

SULLIVAN WILL Still Lead Irish

Notre Dame, Ind., March 21 (INS)—Fellow students of Joe Sullivan, Notre Dame's football captain-elect who died in New York [illegible] will attend a solemn requiem mass celebrated by the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, acting president of the university.

In deference to the memory of Sullivan there will be no captain chosen for his place next season, it was announced by Head Coach Elmer Layden before he departed yesterday for the funeral services in New York.

SECOND TRACK For Los Angeles

Los Angeles, March 21 (INS)—A second horse racing establishment for Los Angeles loomed today as the California racing commission considered an application for a racing permit filed by Norman Church, and a group of associates.

According to tentative plans the new track, if the permit is granted, will be located just outside the Los Angeles city limits, near the Baldwin Hills, on land owned by Mrs. Anita Baldwin.

Mr. Boston

Danno Fears None

By Jack Conway

"Zaharias bout okay for Garden on March 29," wired McGrath. "Danno will get particular delight out of licking the man who made George turn to the referee for protection."

Mr Boston

George was fortunate to win his recent [illegible] contest with Zaharias. [illegible] had scored a fall when Referee Charley Donnell disqualified Zaharias for the alleged used of the strangle hold.

Zaharias is the best opponent Danno has been called upon to meet since he came to the United States. The Greek heavyweight is young, a finished wrestler, and one of the toughest men in the mat game.

He will oppose Gino Garibaldi in Chicago on next Monday night, while he will [illegible] Rudy Dusek as an opponent in St. Louis on next Tuesday evening.

O'Mahoney has already beaten both of these men and there [illegible] no reason why he should not repeat his triumphs.

BOB GODWIN

THE SOUTH has sent another fistic ambassador to Boston in the person of Bob Godwin. The latter is a light heavyweight, and has beaten Maxie Rosenbloom and [illegible] Knight.

Godwin and Knight are the most prominent boxers to come from the South since 'Young Stribling' first started blazing the ring trail behind a terrific right hand punch.

• • •

The Goodwin Club has [illegible] more than its share to [illegible] in boxing, and its [illegible] night should help matters.

The last Goodwin Club show was one of the best ring offerings of the indoor season with McCoy stopping Littman, W[illegible] and Carr and McCarthy [illegible]

N. E. RACING

NEW ENGLAND will certainly have its share of horse racing during the coming season with meetings planned for Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

During the past [illegible] racing has done well [illegible] Rockingham, the pioneer track, continued to be a gold mine even after Narragansett entered the field. Narragansett shattered all marks for mutuel handle in this part of the country.

I look for a successful racing season during 1935, but if the turf game is to continue to prosper the owners of the various tracks will have to limit the number of racing dates.

There is only so much money, and the mutuel machines figure to end up with the greater part of it if the track owners do not use some judgment.

RETAIL Champs PLAY TONIGHT

By Bob Ahearn

Gilchrist's quintet, winner of the Retail Store League championship this season, engages an all-star five, selected from other clubs in this loop at the West End House this evening.

The double bill was originally booked for the Charlestown Y M C A but due to the large demand for tickets Charles Brucket of R H White's, secretary of the Retail League arranged for the playing of the two games at the West End House.

Included in the lineup of the all-star hoopsters selected by Prucket are Bird, Jordan's and Raymond Leopold Morse, forwards; Zubas, R H White or Plunkett, Leopold Morse, centre; Smith, Filene's and Broune, Slattery's, guards.

More than 100 teams have applied for applications for the 19th annual cage tournament of the Boys Club of Boston, Charlestown District which is scheduled to get under way the first week in April.

Johnny Grinnell, Tufts' all-around star, Bob Smith, Brockton's brilliant of a few years back, and Johnny Messina, Medford, have been signed by Napoleon Wheeler, manager of the City Club centre.

Tokio, March 21.—An all-star Pacific Coast baseball team will sail from Los Angeles April 18 for a tour of Japan, it was announced here today.

26 Artists in BIG ACT

By Bill Connell

Whirlwind action, a colorful stage and elaborate settings were being prepared today for the World's Fair skating carnival at the Arena tomorrow and Saturday nights.

The stage is the ice surface of the Arena, tinted blue to give unique color effects. The settings include the various acts of the card, and the dozens of expert skaters provide the action.

The five noted foreign skaters in the fair have arrived in Boston and impressed observers on the first tune-up on Arena ice.

They are Vivi-Ann Hulten of Sweden, Karl Zwack and Idi Papez of Austria and Ernst Baier and Maxie Herber of Germany.

As a result of New York and Canadian appearances, all five are at the peak of their skating form and are sure to thrill the thousands of fans.

The American skaters, however, will match every effort of the foreign group. One of the most elaborate numbers of the fair, the "Rhapsody in Blue," will be presented by the home stars as the fair finale.

TRY THIS

A group of 16 girls, a mixed eight and a pair perform in the scene. Mr and Mrs Willie Frick of Boston, professional skating champions, are the central figures.

The mixed eight are Maribel Vinson, U S women's figure skating champion, Suzanne Davis, last year's champion, Grace Madden, Polly Blodgett, George Hill, James Madden, Bernard Fox and Frederick Goodridge.

100 an Hour in Second Gear

By Universal Service

Whether or not that is a record is not known. But that was the pace Sir Malcolm Campbell set when his monster Bluebird, the fastest thing on four wheels, performed on the beach course in preparation for a final attempt to attain the English peer's goal of 300 miles per hour.

The timing apparatus, necessary for an official speed assault, was not set up. Campbell said he planned only to test the racer and the beach before attempting a possible record run today.

"Danno's mother, in her hospitality, invited him to partake breakfast, and the youthful Danno, clad only in nightshirt, was toddling about the floor.

"The breadth of his infant chest showed through his open shirt and the traveling man, with a bright, knowing eye, patted the lad and said, 'Never have I seen a finer child. God grant him good times. He'll be champion one day.'

"When Danno was scarce eight years he astonished his father by lifting a sack of meal to his shoulders, weighing 140 pounds, and carrying it up a flight of steps to the barn.

"At the age of 18 years Danno, then a tall hunk of a lad, wide through the shoulders and a hand like a basket, was walking cross field by a short cut to a neighbor's home, unknowing that a full-grown dangerous bull was loose in the meadow.

DANNO'S FATHER

Tale of a Madcap Bull

"BEMUSED DANNO STRODE along, whistling a quick tune, when the bull charged, snorting and bellowing with lowered horns and a mad, red eye. With a characteristic shrug of his wide shoulders Danno steadied himself on the balls of his feet. Taking his hat from his head he coolly shook it as the bull charged straight for him with speed of the wind.

"Blowing his hot breath, the animal charged at the hat, and Danno, timing it neatly to the wink of an eye, shot his right foot out with a mighty kick, caught the bull squarely under the jaw and stretched it flat and helpless on the ground.

Thank you, John Barry, schoolmaster of Dreenlomane, Ballydehob, for a tale that carries the simple faith and minor measure of an old song, an echo of ancient, half-forgotten minstrelsy.

Huskies To Go Out Saturday

Rain, snow or heat wave, Husky baseball candidates will take to the open air by the above time at the latest, according to Coach A. Mooney.

Informal workouts have been carried on in the Husky cage for the past month and already Captain Deacon Gills and big Jimmy McCarthy, veteran hurlers, are down to a fine fettle.

These two men who will bear the brunt of Northeastern's pitching duties, may toe the mound for a few innings.

AILING ARTISTS TAKE PART

By N. F. T.

Taking timely advantage of an opportunity the calendar makes possible, some satire labeled "Sprig Has Cub" should provide comedy for loudspeaker patrons this evening at 8:15, wafting a way out of Radio City.

No local station brings it in, but WJZ of New York rates it a highlight.

In other words, a broadcast during which the performers are only those with laryngitis, bronchitis or at least the sniffles, is ready and waiting to hold forth.

"N. F. T."

Phil Duey, who has lately been kachooing all over the big sound sanctum realm down New York way, is likely to be the leading man. Peg La Centra also plans to put over a popular song or two between sneezes. Even the somewhat reckless Rudy Vallee is rumored as having gotten his feet wet. If it's true, he'll likewise be eligible. Although one facetious fellow in our Boston program planning ranks, points to the fact that Rudy sings through his nose anyway and therefore wouldn't have to catch cold for the special occasion.

Casting of a coughing chorus has been placed in charge of a lady named Mabel Phelps, supervising nurse at the studio first aid station.

GOOD MAN GOES

Resignation of Knox Manning from the ranks of WNAC-WAAB "mike" men was brought to light by the well-known local announcer last night. Manning has been regarded by New England listeners as the ace of Boston air spokesmen over a goodly period.

His popularity has risen steadily. No reason for leaving his post was given except "a series of misunderstandings" and no comment was forthcoming from the office of Linus Travers, superintendent of production for the Yankee Network management.

A show boat show given "ashore"—with a cast of 100 and 21 different acts—will comprise the novelty in store for the audience of Capt. Henry's "Show Boat" broadcast this evening. For the first time in their 129 weeks of mythical "mike" journeying, the famous Mississippi River troupe will give their weekly program "on land," meaning (WEEI) from 9 until 10 p. m.

As the story goes, Captain Henry will lead his troupers down the old "gangplank" and up through the palm-lined streets of Miami, Fla., to Flamingo Park, a well known amusement spot, where the gala program is to be given, but actually in New York all the while.

HUB HIGHLIGHT

Mme Lyolene will tell about some of her coats that she has designed. Lansdale Watson will in turn give her impressions of the new Hub structure. And in the spirit of the occasion, entertainment is in store with Buddy Clark's interpretations of songs, to the accompaniment of orchestra music by Rakov.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"When Brakes Won't Hold"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

I've a couple of automobile yarns here today. The first is by John Hurley, of 26 Hurley place, Newton Center. Gosh, John, my sister lives in Newton Center. You and she must be neighbors!

FLOYD GIBBONS

And here it is in a nutshell. "Dear Floyd: My brother almost got hit by an automobile. He was almost killed. He does that every day. One day an automobile just missed him."

Well, Johnny, that yarn of yours is just a trifle too short to win the 10 bucks, but it is so doggone thrilling that I hereby appoint you to full membership in the Adventurers' Club.

And the other yarn? Well, it's even more thrilling than John Hurley's. It was sent in to me by Lemuel B. Bridges, of 123 Pearl street, Somerville, and here is the story—one of the darndest you ever read.

Lem drove out of Boston just about Christmas time in the year of 1922, heading for Pittsburgh on business. His companions on the trip were an elderly gentleman and his 18-year-old son.

And the car they went in—purchased just before leaving—was a second hand affair; one of those old-time peanut roasters of the vintage of 1917.

Nobody knows just what Egyptian tomb that old buggy was taken out of, but it ran, and that was all Lem cared about.

They made the first half of the trip with only one bit of trouble. That was when some loose gravel got into the brake bands and locked the brakes. But that was a minor matter, and easily taken care of.

It wasn't until they reached the mountains of Western Pennsylvania that things began to happen. And then they happened so fast that Lem couldn't keep up with them.

At the foot of the first string of mountains Lem tried to shift into low gear, and the shift lever broke off, flush with the top of the gear case. But that didn't stump Lem for one minute.

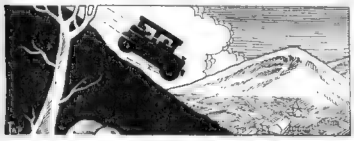
That brought the car to the top of the mountain, where again Lem reached down into the gear case and shifted into neutral.

He figured he could coast to the bottom of that mountain, but there, as Lem himself says, is where he made his big mistake—a mistake that came mighty near to costing Lem his life.

The first part of that coast was swell. Lem, with nothing to do but handle the steering wheel and watch the scenery flit by, was enjoying every minute of it. But his enjoyment didn't last long.



He saw a sharp turn in the road ahead—stepped on the brake—and nothing happened. The pedal went down to the floorboards, but the brake just didn't take hold.

That wasn't so good. Running loose down a mountain, out of gear—and with no chance of getting back in gear—and on top of that, to have the brakes go blooey on you.

No, that wasn't so good at all. Lem grabbed for the emergency brake, and then came to the sickening realization that he had no emergency brake, either.

He had disconnected it from the rod in order to remove the top of the gear case.

Lew broke the news to his passengers in the back seat. The old gentleman's face turned white as a sheet as he gasped: "My God—we're done for!"

But his son only grabbed the robe rail and stared ahead like a man in a trance. The car moved on faster and faster down the precipitous mountain road.

Lem watched the speedometer climb to 40—45—50—while he wracked his brain for some scheme to bring them to a stop.

On the right, the ground fell away in a sheer drop of 50 or 60 feet that ended in a steep slope covered with rocks and snow-mantled trees. Was that rock-strewn slope, Lem wondered, to be his grave, and the grave of his two companions?

The speedometer needle climbed to 60—70. Lem clung to the wheel and held his breath at each curve. What was awaiting him around those curves.

Would it be another car—or merely an unfortunate skid—that would send them hurtling over the side of the precipice to land, a tangle of twisted and burning wreckage, on the rocks below?

Far down in the valley Lem [illegible] a small village nestling between mountains. [illegible] they reached that town would it only be to crash to their deaths [illegible] its narrow, congested streets?

Lem looked at the speedometer again and, to his surprise, it registered only [illegible]. Could it be that the slope down which they were traveling was becoming less precipitous?

No—the grade was as steep as ever. Could the speedometer be out of order?

Lem looked at it again. It read 47—and at the same time Lem's nose caught the odor of burning brakes.

He looked back over the side of the car and, sure enough, smoke was pouring in heavy clouds from the rear wheels.

Some unseen power was applying those brakes, and all Lem could do, as the car slowed to 40 and then 30, was to sit tight and try to figure it out.

It was not until the car reached the base of the mountain, slowed to 20 and came to a stop, not until Lem was out examining those burning brake bands that the real answer came to him.

The same thing that had happened earlier in the trip had happened again. Loose gravel [illegible] the brake bands and locked the brake.

Locked them, at a moment when nothing else in the world would have saved Lem Bridges from death or horrible injury.

Considering the number of people who have autos, I ought to be getting a lot more yarns like that one of Lem Bridges'.

Tomorrow read: "The Shot That Won a War."

HARVARD Presents New Milne Play

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The Harvard Dramatic Club reached into the portfolio of the British journalist-playwright, A. A. Milne, for its 49th production given last night at Brattle Hall, Cambridge.

"Sarah Simple" is the [illegible] work by the author of "Mr. Pim Passes By," "The Dover Road" and "The Truth About Blayds," which the students chose as their offering.

George Holland

It was not the best choice possible perhaps, but the mounting of the two scenes and expert playing by the cast made for a pleasant evening.

* * *

"Sarah Simple," although it seems to be a new one by the one-time very prolific Mr. Milne, is definitely dated. An expository promulgation of an uninteresting unconvincing triangle, the play will not prove a profitable venture if it ever becomes [illegible] for the professional theatre, I am [illegible].

But it won't, I guess. Ina Claire told me that she turned it down when it was offered her and Miss Claire's inspired brilliance would not be enough to save it.

Having seen two of the efforts of the Harvard Dramatic Club, this reviewer has become a cordial sympathizer of these young men, and their friends from Radcliffe's Idler Club who portray the feminine roles of the club productions.

* * *

The young amateurs are faced with the ordinary economic difficulties attached to dramatic production. They find it difficult to budget their expenses against the probable intake and high royalties is not the least among the items.

In their last effort they went to Jean Cocteau's works for [illegible] American performance of "Le Machine Infernale." Now an English dramatist who has not had much luck in the past ten of 12 years attracts their efforts. I think an American playwright or a new playwright should be the Harvard Dramatic Club's next object.

* * *

New playwrights provided the New York comedy hits this season. Laurence Riley, Clifford Odets, Lillian Hellman and Cecil Holm are all new names along Broadway, yet between this quartet the theater has been given (in the order of authorship) "Personal Appearance," "Awake and Sing," "The Children's Hour" and "Three Men on A Horse." These are four of the season's box office hits on Broadway.

Only the veteran Robert E. Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest" challenges the work of these newcomers from a financial or entertainment standpoint.

Next season's Riley, Odets, Hellman and Holm is an unproduced playwright at this writing. A letter to the producers of New York might get results.

The cast of "Sarah Simple" comprised Robert McKee, Romola Robb, [illegible] West, [illegible] Norton Goodwin, Ruth Williams and Frederick Miller. Edward P. Goodnow, a graduate of Harvard and former member of the dramatic club, staged the play.

Charlie Would Star, Peter Lorre in Hungarian Story

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 21—A new and exceedingly interesting friendship is that of Charlie Chaplin and Peter Lorre. Charlie had seen "M," starring Lorre six times and Lorre had a great admiration for the king of comedy, so they met at the home of King Vidor.

Louella O. Parsons

Lorre has just purchased the screen rights to "The Good Soldier Schweyk," a Hungarian play by Garoslev Hasek, regarded as a modern classic.

In telling the story, which has a World War background with a comedy angle, to Charlie, the comedian became so enthused he said he would like to direct it with Lorre in the leading role. You can imagine Lorre's delight and as soon as he finishes Dostoievsky's "Crime and Punishment" for Columbia he and Charlie will talk business.

Elizabeth Allan is to get the break she deserves. Three cheers! After playing in bits and registering in every single one, especially in "David Copperfield," she has been chosen by David Selznick for the leading feminine role in "A Tale of Two Cities." Liz's option was taken up a day or two ago by MGM and I happen to know she was eager to get out of that option so she could go to London and make pictures and remain for longer than just a mere holiday. She will still go to London but she will have to be back in time for the picture. It's still in the lap of the gods whether Ronald Colman will play the lead or not.

Noel Coward said "Au Revoir" to Hollywood on Saturday and left on a tramp steamship for a two months' cruise. He tried to persuade Constance Collier, Ruth Chatterton and others of his friends to join him on this trip which he is taking to China. Mr. Coward does most of his writing this way. "Design for Living" was born while he was on his way from Hollywood to China on a similar jaunt. Julie Haydon sends word that she played the feminine lead opposite Noel Coward in "Miracle in 49th Street" and that Teddy Hecht, Ben's daughter, plays in another one of the Hecht-MacArthur operas.

Chatter in Hollywood: Seeing Jean Parker dancing merrily about the Florentine room at the Beverly Wilshire with handsome Robert Taylor caused everyone to wonder what had happened to Poncho Lucas, her steady boy friend. Jean, who has never gone anywhere without the escort of her high-school Romeo, has finally broken with him. The romance which was very sweet started when both were pupils in high school, but now they have grown up and decided they want to be friends but that love's sweet dream is over.

All of which means that Jean is no longer a little girl.

BERATE Business MEN

BUREAUCRATS ATTACK

By B. C. FORBES

It's all very well for bureaucrats, drawing regular salaries and not trustees of investors' savings, to bawl out business for not plunging into greater expenditures, greater "courage," greater risks.

B. C. Forbes

But corporation and other business managers and directors carry sacred responsibilities to those individuals and families who have entrusted them with their life's savings.

Any executive or director who favored reckless dissipation of funds placed in his care would be criminally recreant to his trust.

The primary duty of managers and directors is to do their utmost so to employ capital that it will yield the most satisfactory return possible. They were not elected to be philanthropists at the expense of security owners. They were chosen for their business ability to administer affairs in a businesslike way, profitably.

Nobody should know this better than Joe Kennedy, head of the Securities Exchange Commission, the latest Federal official to berate business men for exercising business caution. Joe earned the reputation of being an unusually shrewd money-maker.

Had he remained a business man instead of a bureaucrat, it is inconceivable that he would have scolded other business men as he did this week.

Just what is the duty of managers and directors under existing uncertain conditions?

I confess there have been times when business leaders, in my humble opinion, have not exercised adequate daring, have not carefully weighed the influence of their action (or, rather, inaction), have not taken a long-range view, but have been unduly concerned over conserving resources for the moment.

Not a few corporation heads, bankers and others have, it seems to me, erred on the side of caution rather than courage. They have been over-fond of hoarding resources, not pondering the economic and social consequences of their stagnation breeding.

Some have talked as if it were entirely up to President Roosevelt and the New Deal to restore prosperity, overlooking their own duty to co-operate to the utmost limit of prudence.

In view of the way things have been going at Washington lately, however, the present attitude of business and industry is understandable.

Co-operation must be two-sided if it is to be effective. Washington has not been exercising whole-hearted co-operation, to say the least.

The tragic evidence is that Washington apparently has not yet grasped the fundamental fact that it alone cannot generate full-tide prosperity and employment, but that it must earn the confidence and active assistance of the employing and investing classes, those who furnish payrolls and supply capital for enterprise.

Unless substantial progress can be made in this direction in the measurably near future, the danger of another demoralizing downswing in industry, in investments, in employment will become very real, with consequences unpredictable.

It could be so easily avoided if the Administration and men of affairs would only get together, talk things over man-to-man, arrive at a definite and sympathetic understanding—then live up to their pledges.

Of course, sooner or later this amazingly vital nation's natural strength will reassert itself in spite of all obstacles.

Don't doubt that.

Already the way has been very largely cleared for a fresh movement forward and upward.

I vision the United States as a race horse, lined up at the starting-point, eager to get going. But the starter, Washington, hasn't yet given the proper signal.

From private sources I have received repeated intimations that during the last year and more Japan has been systematically strengthening its fighting resources.

If I were a speculator, I would today pick the tremendously depressed bonds and preferred stocks of sound utility operating companies. Confiscation can be carried only so far before the courts intervene.

$3.50 Dividend

Interstate Department Stores declared a dividend of $1.75 on account of accumulations on the preferred stock, together with the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred, both payable May 1 to stock of record March 30.

DISCUSS Problems of RELIEF

SHARE WEALTH REFORMS OLD

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, March 21—The other day I was reading in the works of Sismondi, a French economist who wrote in 1819.

This was a period, like our own, in which world-wide depression had followed a war.

Lewis Haney

Always in such periods we find widespread overproduction, accompanied by unemployment. The usual incomes can't be earned, so consumption is greatly limited, and many wants are unsatisfied.

At such times, theorists arise who assert that the cause of the trouble lies in under-consumption. They propose to remedy the situation by increasing consumption.

So they attack saving, and advocate spending. They say, "let us create purchasing power," so that the people may spend and consume. They propose "work relief," and social planning or public works. They generally get around to financing their purchasing-power schemes by issuing paper money.

Always they are strong for "reforms" which center on "sharing wealth"—which means taking it away from those who have and giving it to those who haven't.

So it was with Sismondi in 1819. So it is with the New Dealers, Longs and Coughlins today.

The demagogues and crackpots seize upon an emergency situation and urge the suffering and discontented to follow them. They urge new deals, share-the-wealth clubs and social justice unions. The game is as old as the hills.

The sad part is that at such times we do need "relief." The needy have to be fed and clothed. People do have to consume in order to live.

During the emergency, people of means do have to help, and the government has to raise taxes to provide the organized relief which social justice requires.

But such emergencies are temporary. We are not going to live in emergencies forever. Nor should we revolutionize government and economic life, as though we were always going to have people consuming without producing—living off the accumulated wealth of other people.

We must remember that in the long run, consumption depends upon production, and that the only enduring basis for spending is an earned income.

CAPACITY Problem BOTHERING Industry

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The vast expenditures of the late twenties for plant extensions and increased productive capacity are returning like the prodigal of old to pester industrial leaders.

Victims of environment, these over-built industrial plants seek not forgiveness, but request captains of industry to take over and then solve their troubles. Witness the confusion of steel leaders who would merge important units in order to overcome surplus capacity. No sooner had their plans neared fruition than the federal government said it couldn't be done.

* * *

President Tom M. Girdler of Republic Steel had readied plans to merge his company with the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company. He thought he had cleared all obstacles. But it was held up at the last minute. Mr. Girdler, admitting the excess capacity of the steel industry, points out that in the best year it had only operated at 89 per cent of capacity. His idea was to smooth out the rough spots by merging, thus making the excess capacity of one district available to other districts that actually had no pig iron to sell at normal times.

Tom M. Girdler

* * *

Notebook: It all appears to be very good business sense . . . For the alternative would seem to be the construction of additional plant capacity where the company had room for expansion of sales . . . And this obviously would aggravate the problem of over production with which the steel industry is struggling . . . And thus the overbuilt units of industry are still clamoring for a solution to their problems . . . And, pitying themselves as returning prodigals who never had a chance in the spendthrift days, they are not in the least penitent.

* * *

In these days of restricted trading the market might be said to be making a lazy bottom. Idling back and forth in a three-point range the general stock list features one thing only: Declining volume. In the long run this will prove a healthy development. Shaky situations should be thoroughly cleaned out and investment accumulation will have had a chance to build up something worth while in the shape of a base. While too sharp technical rallies will not have spoilt attempts to foster a real turn.

* * *

Shorts: Sentiment is gradually becoming better on the utility shares . . . Many comments are heard that it will be a long time before the common issues are worth following . . . Possibly . . . But we find it hard to forget that the same leverage factor that reduced them to present low states will be working the other way . . . Utility preferreds and bonds will go first . . . But do not overlook the common shares just because they have been considerably battered of late.

UN. FRUIT Promotes Big TRADE

Directing attention of stockholders at their annual meeting today to the service rendered by the United States Fruit Co. in promoting trade between the United States and its neighbors in the West Indies and the Central and South American republics, President Francis R. Hart declared that during 1934 United Fruit paid out in the 10 countries with which it does business $18,000,000 in wages.

In the same period it bought $11,500,000 worth of fruit, a total of $29,500,000, which went directly into the hands of the workers of these countries.

This was $4,200,000 more for wages and $3,200,000 more for purchased fruit than was expended in 1933.

In addition to this $29,500,000, the company paid $3,400,000 in taxes to these countries.

GOVERNMENTS

U. S. Governments showed indications of establishing a resistance level following their slow decline of recent sessions.

Cotton Curtailment Nearer

Cotton manufacturers are coming to believe that the general curtailment program they have long sought is nearly at hand. Since last August the greater part of the industry has had on file with the NRA headquarters at Washington a request for permission to reduce operations by groups, but although this request has had approval of the code authority, it has not been approved by government officials.

Now manufacturers have what they consider rather definite assurance that curtailments will very shortly be sanctioned. Most of the 40 groups into which the cotton manufacturing industry as a whole is divided are seeking a cut in operations running up to 25 per cent.

Several of these groups are holding meetings this week to reach an accord on just what they want.

LONDON Market Dull AFFAIR

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

London, March 21—The markets were comatose today, awaiting clearing up of foreign politics. Quotations generally eased, but automobile and aviation shares were firm and several West African gold shares were higher.

Sterling, after early strength, relapsed sharply against all currencies. Spot belgas closed strong on a rumor that ex-Premier Theunis would form the new government, but forwards were weak from the theory that Belgium's internal confidence has been shaken and will not permit lengthy adherence to the gold standard.

Weekly rail traffics were better than expectations, down only 27,000 pounds sterling. February postal receipts were 2.2 per cent up against last year.

Advertising Volume Shows Fresh Gains

Further increases in advertising volume were recorded in February, according to an analysis of newspaper lineage figures in 81 cities released by Advertising Age.

The total was 124,601,000 lines, a gain of 4.9 per cent. This continues a trend which has been in effect for more than a year.

Retail advertising continues to reflect improved business in department stores and other retail lines, the total for this classification for February being nearly 6,000,000 lines ahead of the corresponding figure for last year.

The 1935 volume of retail advertising was 72,104,000 lines, an increase of 9 per cent over February, 1934.

Automotive, which has been irregular in volume, showed a slight loss, recording 5,998,000 lines, a decline of 1.7 per cent compared with last year.

Financial advertising, which has been in the dumps consistently of late, continued its nose dive with a loss of 13.3 per cent, totaling 2,332,000 lines.

The total for 111 periodicals for March, 1935, was 2,082,000 lines, compared with 1,817,000 lines for March, 1934, a gain of 14.6 per cent.

FORD TO Resume Glass MAKING

Detroit—Ford Motor Co. is preparing to install new glass manufacturing equipment in its glass factory at the Rouge plant, and is expected to resume glass manufacture next winter.

The project will cost approximately $3,000,000, and is in addition to $20,000,000 already allocated and partly spent for new equipment, including a new hot strip steel rolling mill, for the Rouge plant.

Ford has not engaged in glass manufacture at Rouge for the past three years. The glass plant is now producing laminated safety glass, utilizing glass supplied by outside manufacture, 1400 men being employed in these operations.

Harvester 1934 Gain Is Shown

Chicago—On total sales estimated at approximately $120,000,000, International Harvester Co. last year placed on its payrolls 10,000 more men than it had a year previous and reported a net profit of $3,948,637 or $4.83 a share on 816,724 shares of preferred stock.

This showing—the first profit since 1931 and highest since 1930—is being extended into the current year, with increasing volume and a profitable first quarter seems likely at this time.

After deducting the full stated value of the preferred stock there was an equity in net current assets of nearly $29 a share for the common as of the last year end.

Increased amount of business has only partially offset this enlarged charge.

MARKET Prices Are MIXED

TOBACCOS ARE EASY

New York, March 21—The stock market limped along at a snail's pace today and prices hovered closely around the levels of the previous day.

Faced with increased tension in European politics and the almost total absence of constructive developments at home, the market had little incentive to go forward, although the extreme lthargy of trading was encouraging tothe extent that it indicated little distress selling and the unwillingness of the shorts to put out new lines.

The indecisive movement in major commodities, reflected in the minor advance in cotton and irregular tone of the early grain markets, also acted as restraining influences, and the ragged appearac of the bond market afforded little inspiration. The return of more normal conditions in foreign exchanges, however, was welcomed.

A crop of rumors purporting to give the reason for weakness in this group on Wednesday ranged all the way from prospective tax increases to some sort of government investigation of the industry.

The treasury announcement that cigarette production in February was more than 125,000,000 ahead of the same month last year failed to stimulate much enthusiasm.

News Is Mixed

The application to the S. E. C. by United Biscuit for permission to issue $5,000,000 in bonds, mostly for refunding purposes.

The Remington Rand report that sales are running 25 per cent ahead of a year ago and that the company had wiped out its deficit at the end of last month and had earned a fairly substantial surplus. Fourth quarter 1934 earnings were 19 cents a share, against 10 cents in the final quarter of 1933.

The heavier tax load noted in the report of General Foods. In 1934 it was $4,619,575, against $2,990,553 in 1933.

The sag in American cotton textile exports to the lowest yardage on record cited by the Association of Cotton-Textile Merchants of New York. The drop was chalked up by the association to the capturing of markets by low cost Japanese products.

Opening exchange rates found sterling off 1⅝ cents at $4.75⅝, the French franc .00⅜ of a cent at 6.60¼ cents, and the belga up .01½ cents at 23.35½ cents.

BOSTON MART Prices Decline

I was compelled to keep it bandaged. I met Mrs. Byon of Williams St., Roxbury, who advised me to consult Dr. Walsh. She said that he had helped her and other members of her family for various ailments and she thought he could help me. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and I am so pleased at the result that I am pleased to make this statement that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for help."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

THURSDAY, MARCH 21, 1935

This Is Our 31st Birthday

NEWS paces the years and progress.

News is the hour-by-hour, day-by-day story of mankind. News is history.

This confidence results sometimes from thoroughness, initiative and accuracy in the gathering of news, sometimes from the manner of its recording—but never except in conjunction with honest and fearless interpretation of its significance.

THIRTY-ONE years ago today, the first Boston Evening American was published.

Between that edition and this, Hearst presses in Boston have set the tempo of the news for all New England.

Within a few weeks of its first edition, The American won the public confidence and attained leadership in the New England field.

The Hearst organization in Boston has 1500 employes.

Its payroll for the last twelve months was $3,000,000.

Its expenditures during the same period were $4,000,000.

Over this span of thirty-one years, The American has been a part of the daily life of more than a quarter of a million families.

The greatest number of people buy it every day because it has merited and won the confidence of the greatest number.

CIRCULATION is the gauge of a newspaper's community standing and the measure of its influence.

To dominate its field, as The American has done since 1904, a newspaper must have a confidence in its community no less than the confidence it inspires in itself.

Bad newspapers are those owned or controlled by selfish interests seeking to exploit the public. They distort news, over-emphasizing it, underemphasizing it, sometimes omitting it altogether.

Their policies are dictated by selfishness. They are not published for the people, so few people buy them.

Indifferent newspapers are those lacking in vision and initiative and the courage to speak the truth.

They are not necessarily controlled by selfish interests but they fear to offend them.

IT MUST, first of all, be a paper for ALL the people.

It must print ALL the news, without fear or favor, and it must be FIRST with the news the most number of times.

It must reflect the will and the conscience of the people.

These are principles laid down by Mr. William Randolph Hearst for the conduct of all his newspapers.

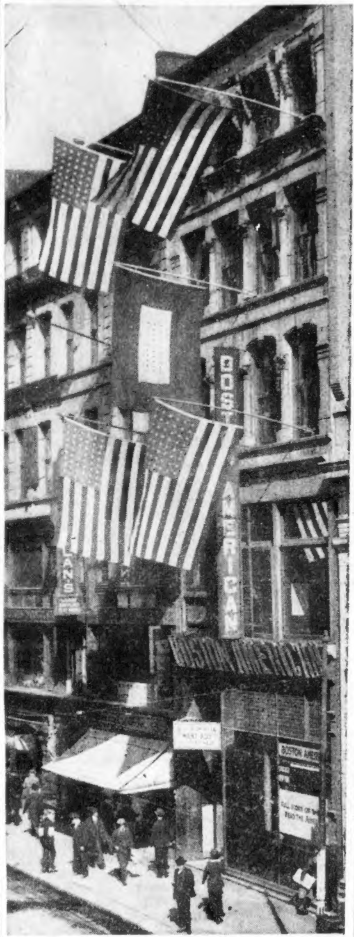
Times have changed and ideas have changed, and certain ideals, but there has been no change in the fundamentals of good newspaper publishing—and there has been no change in the policies of this newspaper since its first edition was cried by newsboys on the streets of Boston—that March day thirty-one years ago.



No. 80 Summer street where Boston American began publication 31 years ago.

On March 21, 1904, The American said:

> "This newspaper proposes to study and express honestly the will and conscience of the people. The higher the conscience, the stronger the will—the more useful a newspaper through which the conscience and the will express themselves."

That pledge, based upon an unchanging fundamental, has been sacredly kept. It is renewed today.

The American has always been and will always continue to be a paper for ALL the people, regardless of creed and political affiliation.

It has printed, and will continue to print, ALL the news without fearing or favoring anybody.

It has been FIRST with the big news on almost every occasion, and it will continue to strive to be FIRST.

Protection of the people from the exploitation of any person or group of persons opposed to the interests of the majority has always been, and will always continue to be its sacred duty under the principles of its founder.

If the paper is to be sincere in adherence to its policies, and convince others of their worth, it must be made by men who sincerely believe in them. If it is to inspire loyalty, its makers must be loyal.

More than three-score of them have been with the organization since its birth in Boston.

Many others who were among its founders remained with it, believing in it, working for it, until Death wrote "Thirty—Well Done," beside their names.

In a roll of honor on this page appear the names of those still in the service who were members of the first staff of the Boston Evening American. Every department of the paper is represented. To their ability and their loyalty, The American owes much.

Many of the 1400 other employes are long-service workers; all of them are able, all of them are loyal.

Into business and industry and charity in this community they annually pour between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

These men and women who make a great newspaper have become established as a great New England institution.

A NEWSPAPER is no better than the readers it attracts.

The great army of the American's readers is not only the largest in the community but it represents that element in the community which is progressive mentally and materially—which is looking ahead and moving ahead, striving and succeeding.

Its readers are the discerning men and women from every walk of life. The American goes home with them at night, or is there when they arrive.

It is because of the type of its readers, as well as the great number of them, that The American has become, increasingly from year to year, a power for the public good.

The forces that menace our patriotism and our independence; the dishonest and the weak in public life; the grafting, the insincere, the selfish—all these arrayed against the common good fear The American because of the power of The American's readers.

Not all of The American's readers agree with everything The American recommends but all of them believe in its sincerity in the presentation of the TRUTH.

AS ELSEWHERE in the world, to a greater degree in some instances, to a lesser degree in many others, the recent years have been trying ones for New England business and industry.

This newspaper's faith in its community, and its faith in honest business as the foundation of prosperity for all the people, has never weakened.

The restoration of prosperity and leadership to New England business and industry will be accomplished.

Its accomplishment will be the result of cooperative effort by all the agencies sincerely interested in the New England welfare.

The American, as during all the thirty-one years of its existence, will do its share, or more.

IN this resume of what goes into the making of a great newspaper, and particularly into the making of the Boston Evening American, we have tried not to be overly enthusiastic about ourselves.

If, here and there, we have failed in that effort—remember this is our birthday.

Surely, when a paper reaches its thirty-first birthday, honest with itself and honest with its readers, without sacrifice of its principles and its self-respect in any instance, a little personal pride in accomplishment may be forgiven.
